JOINING LEAGUE IS NOW FOUGHT BY ROOSEVELT

Governor Says Geneva Body Is Not Plan He Once Urged.

DEBTS CANCELLATION AND HIGH TARIFF HIT

Democratic Candidate Suggests Nations' Meeting to Equalize Duties.

Albany, N. Y., Feb. 2 (A.P.).—Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt, who in 1920 stumped the country for Woodrow Wilson's League of Nations, tonight declared he opposed American participation in the League of Nations.

"The League of Nations today is not the league conceived by Woodrow Wilson," said Mr. Roosevelt, a candidate for the Democratic nomination for the Presidency.

"It might have been had the United States joined. Too often, through the years, its major function has been not the broad, overwhelming purpose of world peace, but rather a mere meeting place for the political discussion of strictly European political difficulties. In these the United States should have no part."

Debts Cancellation Opposed.

Mr. Roosevelt proclaimed against cancellation of European debts, and said he favored an international trade conference to level tariff barriers. The governor blamed the Smoot-Hawley tariff act for trade walls erected by customer nations as a retaliatory measure.

Mr. Roosevelt outlined his views on the three important international questions at the meeting of the New York State Grange. His speech followed by a few days the challenge of William Randolph Hearst that the New York Governor declare where he stood on the league issue. It also followed an assertion by Newton D. Baker, also an advocate of Wilson's league that the league was not an issue in this year's presidential campaign. Mr. Baker is considered a possible Democratic nominee.

The New York Governor, during 1920, as the Democratic vice presidential candidate, carried the Wilson banner of league participation into every section of the United States. His present-day attitude, in light of his declarations then, has been eagerly awaited alike by political friends and foes.

Statement on League.

Referring to his advocacy of the League of Nations twelve years ago, Mr. Roosevelt said:

"In common with millions of my fellow countrymen, I worked and and spoke in behalf of American participation in a League of Nations, conceived in the highest spirit of world friendship for the great object of preventing a return of the World War. For that course I have no apology."

"But the league," said Mr. Roosevelt, "has not developed through these years along the course contemplated by its founder, nor have the principal members shown a disposition to divert the huge sums spent on armament into the channels of legitimate trade, balanced budgets and payments of obligations. American participation in the league would not serve the highest purpose of the prevention of war and a settlement of international difficulties in accordance with fundamental American ideas. Because of these

Gun Battle Halts Reign of Bandits

Stanwood, Iowa, Feb. 2 (A.P.).—Vigilantes struck back today at bandits who have terrorized small Iowa banks several years, killing one robber and wounding and capturing another after the pair had held up the Union Trust and Savings Bank here.

Fifteen minutes after they had fled with $575, the bandits tried to pass a truck parked as a barricade across a highway, eight miles from here.

They fired at four vigilantes behind the truck. An answering volley killed one bandit and the other, wounded, surrendered. Marshal Walter Paul was wounded in the leg by the robbers' bullets.

The bandit car, which carried New Mexico license plates, bore the name of Robert Morse, believed to be the name of the dead man. The captured man refused to answer questions or to reveal his name or that of [illegible] companion.

Two Supreme Court Justices in Hospital

Two Associate Justices of the United States Supreme Court were patients at Emergency Hospital last night. The ailments of both are of a minor nature, according to their physicians, and one of them is expected to leave the hospital today.

Associate Justice Owen J. Roberts, of 1401 Thirty-first street northwest, is suffering from a complication which set in following an automobile accident some time ago. At that time he suffered a shoulder injury which has not healed properly. He was brought to the hospital Friday night.

Associate Justice Willis Vandevanter, of 2101 Connecticut avenue northwest, had his tonsils removed Monday night. Physicians said last night his condition was good and that he would leave the hospital today.

DEMOCRATS WEIGH NEW U. S. AID. PLAN

(Associated Press.)

A Democratic program of help for the jobless was emerging last night from a series of backstage negotiations after a second day of demands for direct Federal assistance on the Senate floor.

Virtually abandoning the plan to return to committee the La Follette-Costigan bill to appropriate $375,000,000 for Government aid, the Democrats were considering a substitute proposal to authorize $750,000,000, divided equally between road construction and loans to States.

The plan was advanced yesterday at a meeting of the Democratic steering committee and will be taken up today at another meeting.

Meanwhile, Chairman La Follette, of the manufactures committee, concluded a six-hour speech begun Monday in support of the bill he and Senator Costigan (Democrat), Colorado, are sponsoring to give $375,000,000 to the unemployed through the States.

"If you don't meet the issue now you will meet it in the campaign of 1932," the young Independent Republican from Wisconsin warned the Senate.

Asserting the need for relief "has gone beyond the bounds of safety," La Follette said social progress of the last 50 years would be "wiped out" unless the Federal Government came to the aid of local communities.

"Failure to enact this bill," he said, "will result in debasing the living standards of millions in the United States, breaking down health and make us pay the toll in malnutrition for 50 years to come."

He denounced efforts to substitute a public works program for direct relief as "attempts to sidetrack the issue." A public works program could not be put into operation soon enough, he added, to "meet the critical emergency situation."

Senator Tydings (Democrat), Maryland, suggested that some senators want more "concrete evidence from governors of States that they are unable to provide the funds necessary."

"I am not willing to wait for that information and let the people starve to death," La Follette replied.

Senator Vanderberg (Republican), Michigan, suggested enactment of the bill might result in "drying up" local relief efforts to such an extent that the total relief would be less than without Federal assistance.

HOUSE FORBIDS U. S. PAY RAISES AND PROMOTION

Pou Resolution Adopted by Overwhelming Majority.

LAGUARDIA CONTENDS AGAINST ACT IN VAIN

The House yesterday at one fell stroke eliminated possibility of Federal pay raises, promotions and filling of vacancies without presidential consent, when a special rule ordering this restriction be placed on every appropriations bill was approved by overwhelming vote.

The resolution, put forward more than a week ago by Chairman Edward W. Pou, of the rules committee, will extend to remaining departmental bills provisions incorporated in Agriculture and Interior Department appropriations measures.

Action was taken over vigorous opposition of Representative Fiorello H. LaGuardia (Republican), New York, after Appropriations Chairman Joseph W. Byrns asserted "any loyal employe would be willing to accept this sacrifice when general wages throughout the country are being reduced."

George Bill Reported.

Meantime, in the Senate, Senator William E. Borah (Republican), Idaho, was making another effort to recommit his three pay-cut bills, brought back to the floor Monday by the appropriations committee. Senator Borah favored sending the bills to the finance committee, but objection by Senator Charles L. McNary (Republican), Oregon, delayed action.

The drive on governmental expenditures continued in the Senate, which received a favorable report from the finance committee on the George bill to give President Hoover authority to reorganize executive agencies of government in the interest of general efficiency. If approved, the broad authorization would give the President power to make widespread consolidation of Federal agencies, and authority to transfer functions from one department to another.

Opposing the special House rule restricting pay increases, Representative LaGuardia declared the Pou proposal "the most un-American bill ever presented in Congress."

"The purpose is to pare down American standards of living and American wages," he said. "That is not the way to get out of a depression. It is wrong in morals, wrong in law, and can not be justified by any standard."

Holds Faith Broken.

Representative LaGuardia reiterated that Congress in taking this step is breaking faith with employes, who after years of service have qualified for the higher rates of pay, eliminated under the rule.

The New York representative charged that the special order is part of a "general organized movement" to cut down wages everywhere; that it is backed by the very banks and financial interests which received benefits from the $2,000,000,000 reconstruction corporation.

He declared the House is taking a step in the direction of placing all legislative power in the hands of the appropriations committee.

(Associated Press.)

Albert B. Fall yesterday lost his last hope of freedom before the end of his sentence for accepting a $100,000 bribe from Edward L. Doheny.

The Federal Parole Board of two men and a woman declined to shorten the imprisonment of the former Secretary of Interior, with an assertion that such action would be "unjustifiable and incompatible with the welfare of society."

Chairman Arthur D. Wood of the board and Irvin B. Tucker and Dr. Amy N. Stannard announced their decision in a tersely phrased statement issued by the Department of Justice. The board remarked:

"Whether or not others equally guilty have not been punished is beside the issue entirely."

Remains Prisoner 6991.

Thus the 70-year-old Fall, first and last to be convicted in numerous trials following the oil land leases scandal of the Harding administration, must remain prisoner 6991, in the New Mexico State Penitentiary until next May 8.

Then his year-and-a-day prison term expires, allowing time off for good behavior. But he has not yet paid his $100,000 fine, and should he continue in default, he must serve an extra 30 days and take the pauper's oath to be released.

Fall went to prison last July 18, muttering "damned hearse," toward the ambulance that carried him over the Southwest plain from El Paso, Tex., to Santa Fe. He had been convicted two years earlier in the District of Columbia Supreme Court.

Denied executive clemency, his case came to the parole board shortly before he became eligible, last November 20. Acting after more than two months' investigation and deliberation, the board said intercessions on his behalf were based "for the most part on sympathy for the applicant's advanced age and alleged physical disabilities," and that the record also contained letters "strongly protesting the granting of pardon or parole."

Compared To Treason.

Emphasizing the high position Fall held, the board said he was the first cabinet member to be convicted of crime.

"Pity is advanced as grounds for taking action which would virtually set aside the verdict of the jury and the judgment of the court," it continued. "Corruption of public trust in high places, acts akin to treason, and affecting the entire nation cannot be tolerated or condoned. It appears conceded as a fact established during several thousand years, and not to be philosophized away, that the fabric of justice cannot endure if mercy be permitted to set aside the penalties meted out in our gravest criminal cases by our highest law tribunals. The case is one of personal guilt, aggravated by nearperjury in the course of the proceedings leading up to trial and conviction."

While Fall is "physically infirm, largely by reason of chronic disabilities incident to advancing age," said the announcement, no evidence was presented to show that his condition would be "specifically aggravated by confinement."

News Calmly Received.

Santa Fe, N. Mex., Feb. 2 (A.P.).—Mrs. Jouett Elliott, daughter of Albert S. Fall, calmly and with resignation received information today that the application to parole her father had been denied.

"There is nothing to be said. We had been led by friends in Washington to expect a report such as this, and we prepared ourselves for it," Mrs. Elliott said.

Francis Victor du Pont Marries Buffalo Girl

Baltimore, Feb. 2 (A.P.).—Francis Victor du Pont, son of the late Senator Coleman du Pont, of Wilmington, Del., was married here today to Miss Janet Marie Gram, of Buffalo, N. Y.

The ceremony was performed at the First English Lutheran Church before the immediate families of the bride and groom and a group of friends which included Gov. and Mrs. Douglas Buck, of Delaware. Immediately afterward the couple left for a wedding trip through the South. Upon their return they will live at Horn's Point, Du Pont estate near Cambridge, Md.

FIRE AGAIN BREAKS OUT IN CHAPEI AREA

Shanghai, Wednesday, Feb. 3 (U.P.). The U. S. cruiser Houston, flagship of the Asiatic Fleet, was sighted off the Woosung forts at the mouth of the Yangtze River this afternoon as a battle waged between Chinese land forces and a unit of the Japanese navy.

As the American Government awaited anxiously the result of its strongest bid for an end of hostilities in China, the Navy Department received word last night that 36 of its citizens were being evacuated from Nanking.

Reports of the evacuation came from Lieut. Comdr. P. W. Rutledge, in charge of the American destroyer Simpson at Nanking. He said the American citizens would leave the Chinese city, which has been under fire of Japanese guns, Wednesday morning (Nankin time) on a merchant vessel.

Fourteen of them were on the Simpson when the message was sent at 7:40 p. m. yesterday (Eastern standard time) and the remainder were in "a safe and accessible place."

Missionaries and Educators.

State Department records indicated that the 36 comprised virtually the entire American population of the city. Approximately 165 Americans are within a 100 mile radius of Nanking. Most of them are missionaries and educators. The American commander said the city was quiet and there had been no resumption of firing.

Shanghai (Wednesday), Feb. 3 (A. P.).—Guns of China and Japan burst out in a new artillery duel today, the second in Shanghai within 24 hours, while Japanese lines were reinforced in expectation that a big Chinese push was about to be launched.

Japanese bluejacket reinforcements were rushed into line in the Chinese Chapei section of Shanghai. Defenses along the Shanghai-Woosung Railroad were strengthened.

Japanese warships in the Whangpoo River were reported to have shelled Chinese troop reinforcements as they advanced along the railway. The Chinese were advancing from Woosung, 16 miles down the river from Shanghai, reports from that quarter said.

Censorship Is Imposed On Messages From China

London, Feb. 2 (A.P.).—Censorship has been imposed on messages from China, the Great Northern Cable Co. announced tonight.

Exactly who has ordered the censorship was not made clear, but it was said that the regulations were not very drastic.

The Eastern Cable Co. also announced that censorship had started.

Bodies of 20 Japanese Reach Sasebo on Ship

Sasebo, Japan, Feb. 2 (A.P.).—The bodies of 20 Japanese bluejackets, killed in the fighting at Shanghai, were brought home today on the cruiser Tatsuta. Also aboard were 87 wounded.

Solemn Buddhist funeral rites were held for the dead sailors. A large crowd attended.

American-Allied Peace Plan

(United Press.)

The American-Allied peace plan, submitted yesterday to Japan and China, after its hasty conception by President Hoover and Secretary of State Henry L. Stimson, offers a basis for solution of the entire Eastern dispute. It could be made to include negotiation of the Manchurian problem. The plan contains five points, as follows:

1. Cessation of all acts of violence by both sides forthwith.
2. No further mobilization of preparation whatever for further hostilities between the two nations.
3. Withdrawal of both Japanese and Chinese combatants from all points of mutual contact in the Shanghai area.
4. Protection of the International Settlement by the establishment of neutral zones to divide the combatants; these zones to be policed by neutrals; the arrangements to be set up by the consular authorities.
5. Upon acceptances of these conditions prompt advances to be made in negotiations to settle all outstanding controversies between the two nations in the spirit of the pact of Paris and the resolution of the League of Nations of December 9 (proposing an investigating commission), without prior demand or reservation and with the aid of neutral observers or participants.

POWERS TO AID U.S. FOR SHANGHAI PEACE

Agree, at Geneva Meeting, to Use Troops to Establish Neutral Zone.

Geneva, Feb. 2 (A.P.).—The great powers of Europe pledged themselves today to diplomatic cooperation with the United States in an effort to insure peace in the Far East by establishing a neutral zone between the Chinese and Japanese forces and by occupying that zone with their own troops.

This plan was announced to the council of the League of Nations by J. H. Thomas, secretary for Dominions of Great Britain, who explained that the Washington authorities had collaborated with the MacDonald government in formulating it.

The French, Italian and German members of the council rallied to the proposal with prompt cordiality. Naotake Sato, Japan's delegate, contributed his part to the historic scene by assuring his colleagues Tokyo approved the scheme and would support it gladly.

Dr. W. W. Yen, China's representative, said he welcomed the proposal warmly as it offered a material basis of hope for getting Japanese soldiers off Chinese soil.

Mr. Thomas told the council that the American and British governments have submitted to Tokyo and Nanking the following formal request:

1. That all acts of violence and preparations for hostilities shall be brought to an end.

"2. That in the Shanghai area both sides shall withdraw their troops and that as a further protection to the International Settlement, a neutral zone shall be arranged.

"3. That negotiations shall then be immediately begun to settle outstanding differences in the spirit of the pact of Paris and the (League of Nations) council resolution of the 9th of December last."

Even more impressive was the declaration with which the British cabinet minister began his remarks. He said:

"His majesty's government feel it is impossible that the present position

POWERS' STAND AIDS ARMS PARLEY HOPES

Geneva, Feb. 2 (U.P.).—The hopes of delegates from 55 nations to the world's most important peace meeting in thirteen years brightened today under the sudden impetus of a drastic movement by four great powers to end the Far Eastern war crisis.

Concerted action by the United States and Great Britain, supported by France and Italy, to dispel the threat of war between China and Japan tended to sweep away the fear that strife in the Far East would becloud the importance of international disarmament conference which opened impressively today.

News of the joint action, announced at a meeting of the League of Nations Council and immediately brought to the attention of the arms conference, brought hope out of discouragement and gave new significance to the words of Arthur Henderson, of England, as he called the international conference to order.

Henderson had been bound to recognize the Far Eastern crisis in his address. The warfare in Manchuria and China, thrust violently into the very councils of the league, could not be ignored, for it had provoked deep misgivings among the conference delegates.

"This tragic event," Henderson said, "at the very moment when this conference meets, the very purpose of which is to take steps toward the maintenance of peace, forced the conference to recognize a situation of extreme gravity in the Far East.

"It is imperative," he said, "that all the signatories to the covenant of the League of Nations and the Briand-Kellogg pact should make it their business to insure strict observance of these two great documents against acts of violence and war."

In the soberly dressed assemblage, minus the glittering uniforms that usually add color to international gatherings—although there were many military and naval officers present in civilian dress—it was the women who relieved the sombreness of the scene.

The great conference hall was in semidarkness when Henderson ar-

Fifth Condition Providing Accord in Spirit of Kellogg Pact Rejected.

TOKYO ASKS ZONES FOR HER PROTECTION

American Move Taken After Request of Japanese and Chinese.

Tokyo, Wednesday Feb. 3 (A.P.).—The Tokyo Stock Exchange reopened buoyantly today, key stocks rising 6 to 7 points in reaction from pessimistic declines which caused a suspension of trading yesterday. The Yokohama Silk Exchange remained closed, but prices on the Kobe Silk Exchange rose in reaction from yesterday's sharp declines.

Tokyo, Wednesday, Feb. 3 (U.P.).—Japan can not accept the fifth condition of the identic United States and British notes which provides for settlement of all outstanding controversies in the spirit of the Kellogg pact, it was announced officially today.

This answer to the notes, presented yesterday to Foreign Minister Kenchiki Yoshizawa, said the fifth condition was absolutely inacceptable since it presumably applied also to Manchuria.

Right to Protect.

The first four conditions of the identic notes would be acceptable conditionally, it was said, although Japan would reserve the right to protect all Japanese nationals with its troops.

Japan feels that the immediate and pressing problem is to effect withdrawal of Chinese forces to a safe distance from Shanghai and believes that negotiations should envisage creation of permanent neutral zones around all principal Chinese ports to prevent future menace from Chinese armies.

Yoshizawa shortly will present an identic reply to the Anglo-American notes.

Shanghai, China (Wednesday), Feb. 3 (U.P.).—China is ready to cooperate to secure cessation of hostilities with Japan and to convene a conference for settlement of the outstanding issues disputed by China and Japan, a foreign office spokesman announced today in commenting on the peace proposals of the United States and Britain.

By HAROLD J. T. HORAN.

The American Government yesterday at the request of both Japan and China tendered its good offices to bring about an immediate cessation of the hostilities in Shanghai and negotiation of the conditions of peace. In this dramatic move the government of Great Britain acted concurrently with the United States by notifying the council of the League of Nations at Geneva and by instructing the British diplomatic representatives at Tokyo and Nanking to take the proper steps.

The concurrent peace offensive of the two English-speaking nations has not minimized the danger of the situation at the mouth of the Yangtze. Conditions in Shanghai and the environs are "critical in the extreme," according to the most authoritative reports.

The Japanese government, however, have given an interesting indication

Rosa Ponselle Pays Tribute To Washington Essay Plan

Glamorous Opera Star Praises Aims of Post's Prize Contest on Life of First President; Many Students Get Booklets.

Rosa Ponselle, glamorous opera star of the Metropolitan Grand Opera Company in New York, who came to Washington last night to sing today at Mrs. Lawrence Townsend's musical morning at the Mayflower Hotel, was enthusiastic in her comments on The Post Washington Essay Contest, in which $1,000 in cash prizes will be distributed to students in public, private and parochial schools in Washington and nearby Virginia and Maryland.

The diva called attention to Washington's own great love of music which distinguished him throughout his lifetime.

She praised the aims and objects of The Post Washington Essay Contest and, in particular, said:

"I rejoice to learn that the boys and girls of Washington and nearby Virginia and Maryland, through The Washington Post, have the opportunity to enter an essay contest dealing with the life of George Washington.

"As Americans we cherish every memory of the Father of His Country. In this bicentennial year it is a wholesome thing that his life story is being brought so vividly to the minds and hearts of our young people. Just to enter such a contest is a high privilege. I congratulate all who are participating in it, whether they prove to be winners or not.

"May I point out to the contestants that George Washington, during his lifetime was a great lover of music. This ennobling fine art had a real attraction for him. He played the flute himself and often found recreation in the habit, even while President. One of the most touching pictures that remain of him

U. S. Banks War on Shipping Of Gold Coins to Hoarders

New Bootlegging Industry Reached Volume of $6,000,000 Last Week; Fancy Premiums Paid; Bankers Abroad Assure Their Support.

New York, Feb. 2 (A.P.).—New York banks put into operation today a definite campaign to end a new sort of bootlegging—that of shipping American gold coins into Europe where they are sold at fancy premiums for hoarding purposes.

The Bank of France and several other leading central banks of Europe, it was stated in private banking advices, had also assured New York bankers of their support.

The new industry is an outgrowth of the world-wide depression. It started in an impressive way about six weeks ago, and last week had reached a volume involving shipment of $6,000,000 of American gold coins weekly to Europe. Holland and France have been two important importers.

The coins have been advertised for sale at premiums of 8 per cent and higher. Foreign investors have been exhorted in advertisements to "insure their fortune" by buying American eagles and double eagles. Prices exacted for clear ringing gold pieces have varied from $21.50 for a $20 coin to around $23.50.

As an effective means of checking the outflow, New York banks have decided to investigate large orders for American eagles to ascertain the purpose for which wanted. When it becomes evident that the purpose is to cater to foreign hording instincts, the requests will be denied. So long as the gold coin is wanted for circulation purposes in this country, the gold will be furnished.

More than $1,000,000,000 of American gold coin is now on supply here. This figure exceeds the total of Federal Reserve Bank gold certificates

RELIEF CORPORATION LEADERS TAKE OATH

(Associated Press.)

Beneath the glare of powerful lights, members of the $2,000,000,000 Reconstruction Finance Corporation yesterday formally undertook their mission of administering to the Nation's business ills.

As protographers recorded the ceremony of swearing in the members of the mammoth enterprise, one of the officers of the corporation, Ogden L. Mills, Undersecretary of the Treasury, predicted little delay before loans would be approved. He had just come from a White House conference.

Those taking the oath were Eugene Meyer, chairman of the board; Brig. Gen. Charles G. Dawes, president of the corporation, and Jesse H. Jones, of Houston, Tex., and Harvey C. Couch, of Pine Bluff, Ark., directors. Wilson McCarthy, of Salt Lake City, the other director, has not been confirmed by the Senate.

Immediately after the ceremony, G. R. Cooksey, of Washington, D. C., was named secretary; Hugh Leach, of Washington, treasurer, and G. A. Marr, of Salt Lake City, general counsel.

Paul Bestor, chairman of the Federal Farm Loan Bureau and a member of the board, also was present at the ceremony.

Inquiries about possible loans up to approximately $100,000,000 have been received by the corporation. Members of the board, however, do not expect that amount to materialize from these inquiries. They will be answered as soon as definite procedure has been decided upon.

The corporation has headquarters in the building in which President Hoover directed the affairs of the Department of Commerce for nearly eight years. The board meets in the same room where the President, as Secretary of Commerce, held weekly conferences with chiefs of the various departmental bureaus. It has been repainted and new floor coverings provided.

At the swearing-in ceremonies Meyer told photographers to "make it snappy, because we have a lot of work to do."

Gen. Dawes objected to the powerful lights, maintaining that they hurt his eyes.

President Hoover yesterday signed a joint resolution appropriating $125,000,000 to increase the capitalization of the Federal Land Banks. This move was an important item in his program for economic stability. Of the amount appropriated, $25,000,000 is earmarked to facilitate postponement of mortgage installment payments of needy farmer borrowers.

A bill to require that the corporation report to a joint congressional committee the names of those receiving loans and the security given was introduced by Senator Wheeler (Democrat), Montana.

Partly through his efforts, a similar provision was written into the bill creating the corporation when it passed the Senate. It was taken out in conference. The reason given for eliminating it was that publicity might endanger the stability of financial institutions receiving loans.

Marshall's Will Benefits Charity

The will of James E. Marshall, a direct descendant of Chief Justice John Marshall, was filed in District Supreme Court yesterday by John Marshall, of Newport News, Va., another direct descendant of the famous Chief Justice of the United States Supreme Court.

James E. Marshall died last October 26 at his home in Fauquier County, Va. His will, dated June 26, 1931, was entirely in his handwriting, and because of the absence of any witnesses to the signing of the document, persons who knew his handwriting were called into the Virginia courts to establish it.

Because Mr. Marshall owned a small amount of property here, it was necessary for the will to be filed here. Attorney James W. Somerville, for John Marshall, asked the District courts to grant him ancillary letters for that portion of the estate located in this city. The Children's Home Society of Virginia and the Home for the Blind in Virginia are the major beneficiaries of the estate.

Bicentennial Ceremony Proclaimed by Hoover

An official proclamation urging citizens of the United States to support the Nation-wide celebration of the 200th anniversary of the birth of George Washington was issued yesterday by President Hoover.

The first President was highly praised by the Chief Executive, who requested that the country organize itself to contemplate Washington's courage, patience and genius.

The proclamation is as follows:

BY THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA—A PROCLAMATION:

The happy opportunity has come to our generation to demonstrate our gratitude and our obligation to George Washington by fitting celebration of the two hundredth anniversary of his birth.

To contemplate his unselfish devotion to duty, his courage, his patience, his genius, his statesmanship, and his accomplishments for his country and the world refreshes the spirit, the wisdom, and the patriotism of our people.

Therefore, I, Herbert Hoover, President of the United States of America, acting in accord with the purposes of the Congress, do invite all our people to organize themselves through every community and every association to do honor to the memory of Washington during the period from February 22 to Thanksgiving Day.

And I hereby direct that on the anniversary of his birth the flag of the United States be appropriately displayed upon all Government buildings in the United States, and all embassies, legations, and offices of the United States abroad.

In witness whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and caused to be affixed the seal of the United States.

Done at the City of Washington this first day of February, in the year of our Lord 1932, and of the Independence of the United States of America the one hundred and fifty-sixth. HERBERT HOOVER.

Leaders of Industry Join Hoovers to Honor Garners

(Associated Press.)

Writing a rare chapter in White House history, the President and Mrs. Hoover last night gathered a brilliant group of industrial and political leaders from both parties in honor of two ardent Democrats—The Speaker of the House and Mrs. John N. Garner.

For the honor guests it was one of their first social appearances during 29 years in the National Capital.

For the White House it was one of the few times a President of one party ever entertained in honor of a Speaker of an opposite political faith.

With an eye to the almost unique occasion, the Chief Executive and First Lady summoned guests from far and near. Mr. and Mrs. Henry Ford were placed at the table for 70 not far from Mr. and Mrs. Garner, who held the honor seats. Nearby were Mr. and Mrs. Walter P. Chrysler.

In the throng that gathered in the brilliant east room just at 8 o'clock were the Democratic and Republican floor leaders of the House, Rainey, of Illinois, and Snell, of New York, both with their wives. There, too, were President W. W. Atterbury, of the Pennsylvania Railroad, and Mrs. Atterbury.

Among the nationally known Democrats were Mr. and Mrs. Melvin A. Traylor. He, like Garner, has been mentioned as a possible Democratic presidential nominee.

Others were Harvey C. Couch and Jesse H. Jones, both Democratic directors of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, Mrs. Jones accompanied her husband.

There was S. M. Breckenridge Long, floor manager for William G. McAdoo, in the famous Democratic convention of 1924, and James W. Gerard, former Ambassador to Germany and treasurer of the Democratic national committee. Another prominent Democrat was Vance C. McCormick, Harrisburg, Pa., publisher and former Democratic national chairman.

But in all the throng Mr. and Mrs. Garner stood out. They arrived, as the Speaker said they would, in a taxicab. He recently renounced his right to a luxurious Speaker's automobile.

"After all, a 20-cent taxi gets up there as quick as a Rolls Royce," Garner commented just before leaving his hotel.

The white-haired, ruddy-faced Texan said he was "happy" to attend the White House dinner despite his almost inflexible rule "against going out," socially. He and Mrs. Garner made it years ago, deciding that legislative business didn't mix any too well with society life.

So sternly have they abided by this idea that when the Texas Society of Washington wanted to entertain them last week they held the dinner in his own hotel. Thus he could "go out" without "going out."

Many a guest last night took note of Mrs. Garner's gown. In her own words, she "just dashed down and got the first thing that looked like me."

It was of black lace, "angel-skin," she said, and was shortened especially so as not to "sweep up dust—even if it's White House dust." The Speaker added it was short enough to permit them to walk home afterward.

Among the other invited guests were Maj. Gen. and Mrs. John A. Lejeune; Louis K. Liggett, Republican national committeeman from Massachusetts; Judge and Mrs. Samuel Seabury, prominent in the New York City investigation; Mr. and Mrs. Fred F. Shedd, Philadelphia editor, and Rear Admiral and Mrs. Cary T. Grayson, who was White House physician to President Wilson.

WOODCOCK OPPOSES FOUR PER CENT BEER

(Associated Press.)

Opposition to a bill to legalize 4 per cent beer was expressed before a Senate committee yesterday by Amos W. W. Woodcock, director of prohibition enforcement, and Dr. Joy Elmer Morgan, editor of the Journal of the National Education Association.

Citing figures for preprohibition years, Mr. Woodcock said the availability of beer in the past "did not decrease consumption of hard spirits" and could not be expected to make the task of enforcement easier.

He added, "Any place where 3 or 4 per cent beer was sold on draft would be a guise for selling hard liquor there also."

Mr. Woodcock expressed the view that the return of legal beer would bring back an institution similar to the old saloon against which, he said, "public opinion is fairly well solidified."

Might Become Saloon.

Even under the Bingham bill, which provides for distribution of beer from warehouses to the home and to hotels and restaurants, he said, "you might have a thing called a restaurant that may become a saloon."

Dr. Morgan said that from the standpoint of the educator conditions have improved greatly under prohibition.

He criticized what he termed "loose talk that has been going on around the country" about drinking among school and college students.

"Conditions among the students by and large are infinitely better than they were before," he said.

"Excepting only the founding of the Christian Church and the establishment of the common school, the eighteenth amendment is the greatest child welfare measure of all history," he continued.

Greatly Improved.

"It is the observation of our school people that conditions of health and home life have greatly improved during the past ten years. Children who formerly came to school without shoes or overcoats are now provided for in spite of the difficulties of the depression.

"In a recent inquiry sent to college presidents, I have some 312 replies. Out of this remarkable response there are only nine which have any serious doubt as to wheather or not conditions have improved.

"It may be assumed that the author of this bill does not consider 4 per cent beer harmful or intoxicating in fact. We can not agree with this.

"Careful experiments in the psychological laboratories show clearly that alcohol even in the smallest amounts affects the reaction time of the central nervous system to an extent that it is a serious handicap to the individual.

Increase in Accidents.

"Were 4 per cent beer legalized we might reasonably expect a steady increase in the number of serious automobile accidents which would affect the schools profoundly. There are more children of elementary school age killed today by automobile accidents than by all other causes combined."

Prohibition Director Woodcock said enforcement is increasing in efficiency and will "drive the traffic to cover" so that only the confirmed drinker will obtain liquor.

Continued pressure on commercial violators, he said, will make liquor so hard to procure that "the fellow who has no special interest one way or the other" will not get it.

"The fellow who really wants to find it will probably get it, just as he gets narcotics, vice and gambling," he said.

Marathon Dancers Lose $170 Profits in Theft

The profits of their weeks on the hardwood floors at the dance marathon, and incidentally their sole reserve, was stolen yesterday from Mr. and Mrs. James Grayson, of 1343 Clifton street northwest, they reported to police. The money, $170, was taken from the trunk of Mrs. Grayson, who danced under the name of Marge Sheffield.

Mrs. A. I. Newman, with whom the Graysons live, lost $100 in cash. Mrs. Grayson also lost a wrist watch and a vanity case which she had won in the marathon contest.

2 YOUTHS DIE TRYING TO CLIMB MOUNTAIN

Third Returns, Half Frozen, From New England Peak to Tell Story.

Twin Mountain, N. H., Feb. 2 (A.P.). A youth with one hand and his face frozen staggered into the base station of the Mount Washington Railroad at noon today and told the keepers he had left his two companions for dead two-thirds of the way up the mountain.

The youth was Donald Higgins, 23, of Winchester, Mass. He said the dead men were Ernest McAdams, of Stoneham, Mass., a senior at Tufts College, and Joseph Chadwick, of Woburn, Mass. The trio had made up a hiking party which started up the mountain Sunday.

McAdams and Chadwick had fallen victims to the high winds and subzero temperature as they struggled toward the summit of the mountain. One by one they had fallen by the wayside as Higgins, to save his own life, fought on to the Summit House, where he nursed his frozen parts, gained strength, and waited for the weather to clear. He came down the mountain today.

Youth Waits for Sheriff.

With one ski strapped to his ankle, Higgins was brought into the station, where he was given treatment and food by Mr. and Mrs. Charles Buckner. He waited there until a sheriff and a posse from Whitefield went to get him.

The only means of communication with the railroad station was through a special telephone line in the United States Forest Service station here. L. G. Spillings, the guard on duty, talked with Higgins on the telephone.

Higgins said "We left home last Saturday and came up here to climb the mountain. We started at 8 o'clock Sunday morning. Although there are several trails up to the summit, we chose to walk the railroad trestle all the way. The wind was driving in our faces, and the snow was blowing. It was below zero, too.

One Rolls Off Trestle.

"We got almost half way up before it really began to weaken us. McAdams was the first to really get fatigued. We thought we had as much chance to make the top as the bottom, and so we tried to stagger on. Then Chadwick began to tire. I was tired, too. When we came to that part of the trestle two-thirds of the way up we reached Jacobs ladder, a place where the wind almost blew us over. Chadwick and I tried to keep McAdams with us, but he fell and rolled off the trestle. Chadwick and I had to keep going.

"I little farther on Chadwick fell. I tried to pull him along, but couldn't. We became separated. I reached the Summit House. I stayed there all night that night and yesterday. By this morning I was well enough to try the descent.

Body Sighted on Return.

"Coming down this morning I saw McAdams' body. It's right under the trestle. I didn't see Chadwick's body at all."

Mount Washington is the highest peak of the presidential range in the White Mountains, which reach the loftiest elevation in Northeastern United States. The summit of Mount Washington is 6,293 feet above sea level. In summer it may be reached by an automobile road and by a cog-wheel railway. In winter, however, the region is a frozen wilderness of steep mountainsides, and yawning ravines, presenting mountain climbing hazards approaching in some respects the perils of the Alps. Terrific winds sweep across the higher altitudes which sometimes are veiled in clouds.

MECHANIC ADMITS 4 HAMMER SLAYINGS

Chicagoan Blames Impulses in Startling Recital of Gruesome Deaths.

Chicago, Feb. 2 (A.P.).—Paul Harrison, 27-year-old automobile mechanic, who said today he had obeyed "impulses to kill" in beating to death four persons, was definitely linked, police said, to three of the hammer slayings," to which he confessed.

The mechanic insisted, authorities said, he was guilty of a fourth, although witnesses failed to identify him, and his description did not coincide with that of the hunted slayer.

As Harrison recounted his confessed career of impulsive slayings, he embellished it with comments that he had married seven women. Margaret Dalesndro, 24, a waitress, told authorities she married Harrison January 16, 1931, but that he left her the following day.

Four Killings Described.

Police said that Harrison told them he was born in Blowing Rock, N. C., and that his parents now live at Holly, N. C. He also has an 8-year-old son in Chicago, Harrison told authorities.

The four killings to which police said Harrison confessed were:

Miss Norma Newby, 37, beaten to death with a heavy wrench after she and her escort, James W. Murray, middle-aged business man, had been forced to drive to a forest preserve and Murray was ejected from the car last March 2.

Charles Pagel, beaten to death January 9 in an obscure hotel, where he had registered with another man.

Dr. James M. Shaffer, aged dentist, who was found, his skull battered in, dying in his office January 23.

Arrested Monday.

Authorities said that in all but the Pagel slaying Harrison had been definitely identified and had furnished evidence linking himself with them.

Harrison was arrested Monday in a West Side hotel on anonymous information furnished police. Beneath his bed, officials said, they found a confession to the Davis slaying, signed by him, and a bloodstained hammer. Taken to the police station, the mechanic said he slew Davis under a sudden impulse to kill while conversing with the watchman who had befriended him.

Last night, the prisoner startled police by announcing he had swallowed a slow-working poison, but today Harrison told police the "poison" was a sleeping potion.

Flier to Bomb Hut Of Canadian Killer

Crazed Trapper Still Defies Mounted Police Behind Barricaded Doors.

Edmonton, Alberta, Feb. 2 (A.P.).—A war hero of the air was signed up today by the Royal Canadian mounted police to drop dynamite bombs on a hut in the barren wastes of the Arctic Circle where a crazed trapper has been hiding since he killed a "mountie."

The air expedition against the barricaded man, Albert Johnson, will be undertaken by Capt. "Wop" May, famous Northland flier. His flight to the improvised fort, 80 miles from Aklavik, on the Rat River, will take him almost 1,500 miles along the wandering course of the mighty Mackenzie River.

More ammunition and supplies for the mounted force, which has been seeking to force the surrender of Johnson since the slaying last Saturday were dispatched today.

Johnson, believed surrounded in the bleak hill country, 30 miles up the Rat River, was cornered after he had fled from his cabin near Arctic Red River. It had been besieged for fifteen hours by mounties in 50-below-zero weather.

HooverPicksOklahoman For High Court, Report

Guthrie, Okla., Feb. 2 (A.P.).—The Guthrie Daily Leader says it has learned on high authority that Orie L. Phillips, of New Mexico, Circuit Judge of the Tenth Federal District, has been decided upon by President Hoover to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes, of the United States Supreme Court.

A quiet poll in Washington, the newspaper says, had revealed some opposition to Phillips for the high court due principally to the fact he was once recommended for a United States district judgeship by Albert B. Fall, imprisoned former Secretary of the Interior. Judge Phillips has been mentioned recently in Washington dispatches as likely to be considered by President Hoover for the position.

SMITH SAYS PARTY NOW IS IN MAJORITY

Avers Democrats Can Win This Year Because of Raskob's Efforts.

New York, Feb. 2 (A.P.).—Victory, said former Gov. Alfred E. Smith, in a radio talk tonight, is within reach of the Democratic party, "which today is the majority party."

He said the winning of the 1932 election is possible because of the work done for two and a half years in Washington under the leadership of John J. Raskob, chairman of the Democratic national committee.

"If you let some one keep telling you that as long as the Republican party is running things there'll be a car in every garage and everlasting prosperity, you get to believe it after a while," he said. "That is, unless you know the other side of the story."

Smith said the Democrats had remained the minority party until the spring of 1929 because they were not equipped to tell this "other side of the story."

In the 1930 elections, he said, on a basis of a compilation of the popular vote, the Democratic candidates received nearly a 2,000,000 plurality in the 37 State-wide contests—"a Republican loss of more than 7,000,000 votes, as compared with the 1928 campaign.

His address was devoted almost entirely to a plea for funds for the Democratic "victory" campaign. He said Illinois has raised $50,000; Maryland, $10,000; Indiana, $7,000; New Mexico had topped its quota, and good reports had been received from Florida, California, and some other States.

Ecuador Crushes Revolt; 2 Seized

Newspaper Says Rebels Again Have Attacked Troops, However.

Guayaquil, Ecuador, Feb. 2 (A.P.). The government today announced it had crushed a revolt in the area of Tulcan near the Colombian border and imprisoned two men described as its leaders.

The Quito correspondent of El Telegrafo said, however, that the rebels had reorganized and again attacked the Tulcan barracks with machine guns from the towers of a church in front of it. Federal troops were resisting the attack while awaiting reinforcements, he said.

Sixty rebels and five federals were killed in an eight-hour battle in which the Manabi battalion recaptured the barracks.

Need of World Today.

"What the world needs most today is a national policy which will make us an example of national honor to other nations. The first lesson for all the world is recognition that a treaty is a nation's word of honor to another nation, and that all just national debts are debts of honor; that therefore no honorable nation may break a treaty in spirit, any more than they may break a treaty in letter; nor, when it is a debtor, may repudiate or cancel a national debt of honor.

"Europe owes us. We do not owe her. Therefore, we should call a meeting of our debtors here and not in Europe, and demand an understanding. If it were considered advisable in the present condition of world finance to postpone the payment of debts for a while, we should nevertheless insist upon an accord as to when payments should begin and in what amount.

"Europe has indulged herself in an orgy of spending and finds herself at the moment in a crippled financial position. * * * She should cease to blame us for all the ills and try to remember the aid we gave her in time of need; aid for which she was once grateful, but which she has forgotten."

Mystery Illness Takes Third Life

Medical Science Baffled in Search of Antidote for Disease.

Mount Vernon, Ohio, Feb. 2 (A.P.). Modern medical science worked in vain today to discover an antidote for a mysterious illness that within the last two weeks has proven fatal to three brothers, sons of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Paazig, Knox County farmers.

The last victim, Marion, 6, died this afternoon a short time before State health department chemists at Columbus announced themselves baffled after a 24-hour series of tests.

The eldest of the three brothers, 9, died suddenly January 24. A week later Raymond, 8, was stricken and died within a few hours. Marion, the youngest, became ill yesterday.

The frantic parents fear that the lives of their three other sons may be in danger, and State chemists announced they would continue their tests in an effort to discover the cause of the illness.

MacDonald to Have Operation on Eye

His Condition Not Serious; Baldwin to Preside at Cabinet Meetings.

London, Feb. 2 (A.P.).—Great Britain will temporarily lose the services of her pilot tomorrow in the midst of a world crisis.

The ailment did not come upon the premier without warning. He had suffered intermittent headaches for a long period during a series of national and international crises and his friends had warned him for months that the strain would wear him out.

During the premier's absence Stanley Baldwin, Conservative leader, will preside at cabinet conferences.

It read: "Mr. Rockefeller has had a slight cold for a few days. But at no time has it been of any serious character. He has each day been steadily improving and is practically well again."

Big Butter and Egg Man Scarcer Than Hen Teeth

By JOHN J. DALY

WHAT has become of the Big Butter and Egg Man?

Billous times be upon us, and there is need for the return of the wanderer.

Throughout the land there is clamor for trade revival and the restoration of prosperity, for the speeding up of business and the marshaling of all manufacturing forces. The United States Senate is concerned with the mightiest problems that ever confronted a nation, the House of Representatives mulling over ways and means of taxation. A torpor lies over the land.

There was a time when Prosper A. the golden goddess, clinked glasses in the cabarets. Through the midnight air came the songs and shouts of merrymakers. The Big Butter and Egg Men were "throwing parties."

Those were the good old days.

NOW, bankers and brokers, broke and not banking, are polishing up their tin cups. There is no need for such a spectacle when by the simple process of gathering all the Big Butter and Egg Men together, say, in convention assembled, the night would again be filled with music and the cares that infest the day would fold themselves up like Arabs.

In the heydey of the Big Butter and Egg Man, everybody was happy. We poked fun at the fellows who threw their money around with liberal hands, true, but it was all good-natured fun, and no offense meant. Still some of the members of the Big Butter and Egg industry must have taken the raillery to heart, for not a man is now left. He has gone where the Arabs go.

* * * * *

SAD days these, without the sparkle of laughter and solitaires and the grasp of the hamlike hand of good fellowship. America will never be the same old place until it lures back its Big Butter and Egg Men—mighty monarchs of money, who turned on all the lights and scattered twenties among the saxophone lads.

Wherever they are, at seashore or on mountain top, the longings of a dilapidated Nation are with them, and the song of the gold digger, her pickax dull, is heard in moanful murmur:

"Bring back, bring back my Big Boy to me."

DISTRICT WILL KEEP PAIR AFTER PROTEST

Decision for Dismissal of Atkinson and McGrew Is Reconsidered.

Acceding to protests from members of Congress, the Federation of Citizens Associations, the Building Trades Employers Associations and others, the District Commissioners yesterday decided to retain two employes they had announced last week were to be dropped to offset the expense of hiring a director of construction at an initial salary of $6,500.

A. S. J. Atkinson, who had been with the District government for 29 years and who first heard of his impending discharge by reading about it in the newspapers, is to be retained as an assistant inspector of buildings at the same salary of $2,500 he received as inspector for the board for the condemnation of insanitary buildings. The order states that he will replace M. U. Haley, resigned.

Charles B. McGrew, who was employed as assistant to the assistant municipal architect, is to be retained at a salary of $3,800, but he is to be transferred to the Municipal Center section as an associate engineer.

Maj. D. A. Davidson, Acting Engineer Commissioner, in explaining the dismissal of these two men last week, said that their jobs are no longer necessary.

No efforts are being made, however, to cancel the employment of Harold W. Baker, of Rochester, N. Y., who is the new director of construction. Several protests have been made that he was chosen from outside Washington.

SENATOR SIMEON D. FESS.

WHEN Senator Simeon D. Fess (Republican), of Ohio, walks to his desk in the Senate chamber one unconsciously expects him to tap his desk with a pencil and call the class to order.

Even in his manner of speech the Senator has about him that air of preciseness which seems part of the accoutrements of the teacher. His garb is subdued, careful, sedate. He might at most any moment step into a pulpit and preach. If he ever said the word for which darn is a mild and polite equivalent the Senate probably would rise to its feet in sheer amazement.

But any who looked on the spare, medium-statured figure of the Ohio senator would be impressed that in his compact form was bound a great store of energy, nervous as well as physical. None would doubt that the senator has thought the equivalent of darn many a time despite the absence of the word from his recorded sayings. One can see it in his unspoken disapproval of the things which sometimes occur on the Senate floor.

However proper and precise the senator may appear to the unitiated, he is no tyro in politics, even though the crumbling of the power of the Antisaloon League and the rising flood of wet sentiment may eventually find him on one of the few remaining dry pinnacles; but when that time comes it would be surprising if the Noah of the day did not have a compass and a knowledge of the location of the pinnacle.

Occuping the position of chairman of the Republican national committee, Senator Fess has been blame for results in recent elections for which he was not responsible. There is talk that he will resign. But he has made it plain he shall not resign under fire. If the whole Antioch College had gone on strike when he was president he probably would have carried on minus students to teach, confident that when the students came to their senses they would return with proper apologies.

Senator Fess had been regarded as one of the spokesmen of the Republican administration which have governed the country since the departure of Woodrow Wilson from the national stage.

He was born near Lima, Ohio, on December 11, 1861. He is a member of the Methodist Episcopal Chuch and is a thirty-third degree Mason. He has been professor of history and of law, dean, vice president and president of colleges, an author and a lecturer. He was vice president of the Ohio constitutional convention in 1912. He was elected to the Sixty-third and four succeeding Congresses as a member of the House, which he left to run for the Senate, to which he was elected in 1922 and to which he has been reelected. He was temporary chairman of the last Republican national convention in Kansas City in 1928.

Monroe Passing Through Its Gravest Crisis; Kentucky Conditions Worse.

Monroe, La., Feb. 2 (A.P.).—Passing through its gravest crisis in flood history, this thriving northeast Louisiana city today appealed to President Hoover through Louisiana's executive offices for $250,000 with which to combat the record stage of the Ouachita River.

Meanwhile, the 27,000 residents of Monroe have thrown their entire manpower into the fight to save the city from inundation.

Alexandria, city of 23,000 population on Red River in Rapides Parish, today looked upon a 150-foot crevasses in the main river wall in sparsely settled Avoyelles Parish below them as a "happy solution" of their flood problem.

40,000 More Acres Flooded.

This morning the levee gave way near Vick, 45 miles farther southeast of Alexandria and sent floodwaters over an estimated 40,000 acres of land in Avoyelles, Concordia and Catahoula Parishes.

Alexandria is anticipating a fall in the new high mark of Red River within a day or two due to the great outflow through the crevasse.

Acting Gov. Alvin O. King, after an official inspection of the flood area today designated the Red Cross as the official relief agency. He asked citizens to contribute funds and supplies and formally requested President Hoover to authorize $250,000 or $300,000 for relief in Louisiana under the Jadwin plan of flood control.

3 Rivers Menace Kentucky.

Louisville, Ky., Feb. 2 (A.P.).—Three rampaging rivers—the Cumberland, Green and Ohio—overflowed western Kentucky lowlands tonight, as they moved on toward the Father of Waters, itself swollen beyond flood stage.

In the southwestern tip of Kentucky, the Mississippi itself sent a stream of refugees pouring into the towns between Wickliffe, Ky., and Ripley, Tenn. Property loss in live stock and crops was estimated at thousands of dollars, and many highways were overflowed. The main highways were still free of water, however. The chief damage was in Ballard, Carlisle, Hickman and Fulton Counties.

Indications were that the number of homeless would be augmented hourly, as none of the three mighty currents had reached a crest. The Ohio was leaving its banks from below Owensboro to its confluence with the Mississippi at Cairo, Ill.

SYLVIA LENT EARNS PLAUDITS IN RECITAL

Capital Violinist Charms Her Audience in Concert at Central High School.

Displaying a remarkable ease and ability in a variety of compositions, Miss Sylvia Lent, Washington violinist, was heard last night at Central High School in the only individual concert appearance she will give this season. She was presented by the Community Institute.

At the conclusion of each group of pieces the brilliant young violinist was extended an ovation, being recalled to the stage with her accompanist, Frank Bibb, repeatedly. With bobbed auburn hair and wearing a long gown of pure white, draped with a scarlet sash, she was like a young heroine out of Shakespeare, and the music that she played was as caressing to the ear as the flowing language of the Bard of Avon.

Two of the compositions were by Washingtonians, "Melody at Dusk," by Mrs. Mary Howe, and "Ballade," by La Salle Spier. The latter accompanied Miss Lent in this rendition. The violinist soared to breath-taking heigths in Cesar Franck's "Sonata." The exquisite notes floated from the auditorium to the street, where a passing music lover, unaware of the concert, recognized the "Sonata" and entered to hear it completed.

Although trained in this country, Miss Lent made her debut in Berlin, on the advice of the late Prof. Auer. She was first heard in America in March of the following year. She plays frequently with the foremost symphonies of the country, but is rarely heard in an individual recital.

Insurgent Miners Lose in Voting Test

Demand for Resignation of Union Officers Is Soon Defeated.

Indianapolis, Feb. 2 (A.P.).—Demands that the international officials resign and efforts to curb their power by changes in the constitution were overwhelmingly defeated at today's session of the biennial convention of the United Mine Workers of America.

The antiadministration resolutions were voted down with regularity interrupted only by some debate. The fight for changes in the constitution represented a last stand by the insurgent delegates from District 12 in Illinois. They failed to win a single point.

The convention also voted to adopt some changes in the organization's constitution, including the demand for a five-day week. The six-hour day demand was already a part of the constitution. Another change was to add the words "and unemployment insurance" to an article which seeks enactment of statutory old-age pension and workmen's compensation laws.

Barring of Maneuvers In Lax Dry States Urged

(Associated Press.)

Legislation to prohibit naval or military tactical maneuvers in States that do not have "an adequate code of laws for concurrent enforcement" of the eighteenth amendment was introduced yesterday by Senator Jones (Republican), Washington.

Jones, a prohibitionist, said the measure would not affect the Military and Naval Academies at West Point and Annapolis or the Coast Guard Academy at New London, Conn. The bill said soldiers and sailors are subjected to "undue temptation" and "circumstances tending to develop an attitude of disrespect" for the Constitution by being stationed in States where adequate State law enforcement codes are not in force.

DR. CHARLES BULLA DIES IN NASHVILLE

Nashville, Tenn., Feb. 2 (A.P.).—Dr Charles De Haven Bulla, 70, for many years a leader in Sunday school and publication work on the Methodist Episcopal Church south, died here today after a long illness.

At the time of his death, he was associate editor of the publications of the board of Christian Education of his church. Previously he had served as editor of various church papers and general Sunday school literature, and as pastor and presiding elder.

He was born in Albany, Mo., and educated at the University of Missouri. He entered the ministry in the Baltimore conference, in 1895, while living in Washington. During that period he sponsored the erection by Methodist Epworth leagues of an equestrian statue of Francis Asbury, first American Methodist bishop, in Washington.

Dr. Bulla became editor of the Baltimore Southern Methodist in 1910, and soon afterward was called to Nashville to be corresponding secretary of the Sunday school board of the church. In that office he was largely responsible for the Wesley Bible Class movement in the denomination.

After ten years with the Sunday school board, Dr. Bulla reentered the ministry and served from 1921 to 1927 as presiding elder of the San Francisco and Los Angeles districts of the Pacific Conference, returning here to the post which he held until his death.

Reichsbank Credit Renewal Is Likely

Extension for Half of Its $100,000,000 Payment Already Assured.

New York, Feb. 2 (A.P.).—The German Reichsbank has been assured that at least half of its $100,000,000 central banking credit, which expires Thursday, will be extended, and favorable word as to the balance is expected within the next two days, Wall street bankers said today.

The Federal Reserve Bank and the Bank of France, two of the four signatories to the credit arrangement, have not yet announced their intention. The Bank of England and the Bank for International Settlements have already announced their readiness to grant an extension.

The New York Reserve Bank will hold its regular weekly board meeting on Thursday, the maturity date, but it was said today that an announcement of this institution's willingness to grant more time might be made tomorrow. The Bank of France was said in Paris advices to Wall street, to be willing to renew its share.

Akron's Accuser Seeks to Testify

McDonald Plans to Be Here Saturday and Confer With McClintic.

(Associated Press.)

Representative McClintic intends to find out definitely Saturday just what, if anything, one of the workers on the Akron thinks is wrong with the airship now.

A telegram from E. C. McDonald, of Washington, who has claimed the Akron is defective, led the Oklahoma Democrat to make that statement yesterday. Mr. McDonald was in Florida when the House naval committee conducted its hearings on alleged flaws in the airship.

Mr. McDonald's message yesterday said he would be in Washington Saturday to discuss the subject with Mr. McClintic, chairman of the Akron investigating subcommittee.

"I will decide after I talk with McDonald whether the subcommittee should hear what he has to say," Mr. McClintic said. "He has not been discredited and his detailed statement should be interesting."

Daughter's Secret Wedding To Hunter Irks British Peer

Hon. Averill Furness Is Married to Father's Chief Guide and Parent, Shipping Magnate, Retaliates by Dismissing Him From Expedition.

Nairobi, British East Africa, Feb. 2 (A.P.).—The secret jungle romance of the Hon. Averill Furness, daughter of Viscount Furness and stepdaughter of a wealthy American woman, had an unpleasant aftermath today after Lord Furness learned of her marriage on January 24 to Andrew Rattray, famous Kenya hunter.

Today's East African Standard carried the following notice bearing the signature of Lord Furness:

"From and after January 24 Mr. A. Rattray ceased to be the white hunter to my safari and from that date he has no authority to order anything on my account."

A year ago Mr. Rattray, who is 50 years old, brought two zebras to England for Lord Furness, who in 1926 married Mrs. Thelma Morgan Converse, daughter of Henry Hayes Morgan, former American consul general to Buenos Aires.

In the London home of Lord Furness, who is a shipping magnate, the hunter met the peer's only daughter, the pretty 24-year-old Averill, who had gone places with the Prince of Wales. He liked her, lots.

Late in 1931 the adventurous Averill went with her father, whose hobby is big game hunting, on an expedition to Tanganyika. While her father was out with the native boys a few days ago, she and Rattray were married with only a maid and typist as witnesses.

They tried to keep their secret, but after a few days most of the Nairobi knew the hunter, whose home is at Isiolo, one of the loneliest places in Kenya, had won the heart and hand of the famous wealthy Briton's daughter.

When they realized they could not keep the cat in the bag, Averill sent an airplane into the jungle to find Lord Furness and acquaint him with the news while Lady Furness, who was at Melton Mowbray, England, was informed by telephone.

Mr. and Mrs. Rattray are staying with friends 7 miles from Nairobi. Meanwhile Lord Furness has engaged J. P. Lucy, who has killed 300 lions, as his new head hunter.

Mrs. Rattray killed her first stag in the highlands when she was only 12 years old and at the age of 16 she had brought down four stags with four successive shots. She used to be seen frequently driving a phaeton and high-stepping pair of horses in London's West End.

Doctor's Injection Kills 2 and Himself

Son Saved by Cries 3 Days After Physician, 64, Gives "Medicine."

Highbridge, N. J., Feb. 2 (A.P.).—Injecting a deadly poison into his wife, his two children and then himself, Dr. Frederick Low, 64, killed all but the 15-year-old son, Frederick Low, jr.

The tragedy was undiscovered for nearly three days, while the boy lay in a stupor, his system fighting against the poison, which he said his father told him was an antitoxin injection. Today he revived, crawled with a great struggle to the telephone and knocked the receiver from the hook.

"Help! Help! Send help!" he called feebly.

A telephone operator responded and obtained assistance from Harvey Hoffman, operator of a garage next door, to the Low home.

In the physician's office he found the boy, who is a student at Franklin and Marshall Academy, Lancaster, Pa. In the living room the doctor's body lay on a divan, and upstairs were the others—Mrs. Low, 38, and their daughter, Mary, 11.

Thin Garb Heightens Job Of Orator, Dr. Heyl Finds

Heavy Overcoats of Their Escorts Absorb Sound Waves More Easily.

(Associated Press.)

Orators who strain their lungs addressing women clad in silks and chiffons might be heard more easily in many cases if they were speaking to men wearing overcoats.

This is because sound waves are readily absorbed by heavy clothing, Dr. Paul R. Heyl, sound expert of the Bureau of Standards, has discovered. Most auditoriums, he says, have too much reverberation—it takes too long for a sound to die away. Sounds "step on each other's heels," making it hard to hear.

An audience of women in thin clothing, sitting perfectly quiet, may make it almost as difficult for a speaker to be heard as if they were whispering and chattering. Their clothing does not absorb enough of the excess sound. But if the women were replaced by their husbands, wearing business suits, much of the sound would be absorbed and the speaker would be heard more clearly.

A sound should "bounce" or reverberate about the room not longer than from one to two seconds, depending on the room's size, Dr. Heyl has found. If it reverberates longer it will interfere with the next sound. Sound-absorbing audiences help get one sound out of the way before the next one comes along.

Dr. Heyl has discovered how much sound is absorbed by men and women with and without coats, by mixed audiences, by auditorium chairs, theater seats and church pews when empty and full of people, and by tiles, plasters and other finishes used on auditorium walls and ceilings. Knowing these facts, architects can design a hall in which the reverberation will be just long enough to make hearing easy.

Using a sound with a frequency of 512 cycles per second, similar to a fire siren, it was found that a woman without a coat absorbs 2.3 as much sound as a square foot of open window. With her coat on she absorbs 4 times as much. A man without his overcoat absorbs 4.1 times as much; with the overcoat, 4.8 times as much. The tests were made on people seated in cane-bottom chairs with open backs.

With a mixed audience seated in cane-bottomed chairs, each person absorbs 3.2 times as much sound as a foot of open window. In heavily padded theater chairs the absorption is 3.9; in church pews, 3.3.

A tomb-like sound-proof room is used for sound-absorption tests. The exact length of time needed for a sound to die away—its reverberation time—in that room is known. Then people, furniture, or wall materials are placed in the room, and its reverberation time again is measured. The difference indicates how much sound is absorbed by the object being tested.

Rectangular rooms usually have the best acoustics, Dr. Heyl reports. Walls and ceilings should not be smooth or curved. Smooth walls caused echoes; curved walls concentrate reflected sound waves, causing "dead spots" where hearing is difficult and sound foci where the sound is too loud.

SPURT BY WORKERS BOOSTS CHEST SUM

$113,104 Is Collected in One Day as Drive Goes On for $369,413 More.

The rest is up to Washington.

This was the consensus of opinion of Community Chest leaders yesterday after the workers, showing a seeming renewed spirit of aggressiveness, had reported the largest daily total contributed since the campaign formally opened. The day's offering was $113,104.93, bringing the total to date to $2,231,586.71, and leaving $369,413.29 to be raised by 7:30 tonight, when the final report meeting will be held at the Willard.

Encouraged by the fine spirit shown by the workers yesterday, Campaign Chairman Edward F. Colladay predicted that if this group could reach all who have not yet given between the time of yesterday's meeting and tonight's report meeting, that the Chest goal of $2,601,000 would be nearly, if not quite, attained.

"We Shall Not Fail."

"I have a sense that somehow we shall not fail," the Rev. Joseph R. Sizoo, pastor of the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church, told the workers. "The Government workers have made good. The well-to-do, solicited by the special gifts unit, have made good. It is the balance of us, the people who represent the cross section of the entire city, who are breaking down, and this must not be. It would mean the breaking down of the spirit of democracy which inspires us to share responsibilities. It will mean that we are willing to share in times of prosperity, but not when there is a real need. If we fail democracy will be challenged; it will mean that we have no heart. I tell you that we have the machinery, the workers and the publicity. What we need is more heart. Throw your whole life into this thing. It is largely in your hands and you must not fail."

Elwood Street, Chest director, urged the workers to follow through on every prospect and to use the emergency pledge cards which, he said, had already shown good results.

Letter From Mrs. Hoover.

John Poole, Chest president, read a letter from Mrs. Hoover expressing her gratification at having been invited to the opening meeting of the campaign, and her pleasure at having attended. She congratulated the Chest on the amount raised so far and predicted final success.

Before reporting for the Metropolitan division, H. L. Rust, the chairman, announced that the black cat, presented as a mascot by the Nu-Grape Co. the day before, would be retained as a mascot and that the Metropolitan unit would bid it in. He also announced that the Sanitary Grocery Co. had written a note stating that its employes had used a box of Sanico sardines for a mascot, had raised 134 per cent of their quota, and were now donating the sardines to the cat in order to increase its usefulness as a mascot.

Clarence A. Aspinwall, chairman of the Special Gifts unit, reported $6,250; Sidney F. Taliaferro, Schools unit, $5,024.01; Lloyd B. Wilson, Group Solicitation unit, $21,511.52.

Ten Teams Listed.

The total for the day was $113,104.93, which, added to the total previously reported of $2,118,481.78, brought the total to date to $2,231,586.29.

The ten teams of the Metropolitan unit reported at yesterday's luncheon meeting as having raised more than 100 per cent of their quotas are as follows:

Team 2,243, Mrs. J. V. Brownell, chairman, $8,310, 301 per cent of quota; team 2,251, Maurice Maser, chairman, $2,961, 207 per cent; team 2,112, Arthur Adelman, chairman, $4,735, 150 per cent; team 2,344, Dr. Raymond Hutchinson, chairman, $1,381, 146 per cent; team 2,324, J. F. Carlson, chairman, $871, or 139 per cent; team 2,343, Charles Krey, chairman, $417, or 135 per cent; team 2,262, William Hanson and Wilmer Stickle, chairmen, $1,858, or 112 per cent; team 2,363, Frank M. Joseph Tumulty Speaks Over Radio for Chest

An impassioned plea for every man, woman and child in Washington to enlist under the banner of charity and, following that banner, to sweep the Community Chest over the top today, was made last night by Joseph P. Tumulty, secretary to the late President Wilson, who spoke over WMAL. The occasion was "Community Chest Night" on the radio program of Joseph D. (Radio Joe) Kaufman, who devoted his entire period to the Chest, acting as master of ceremonies and introducing Mr. Tumulty, who made the principal talk.

Mr. Tumulty said in part:

"This hour of need is one that calls for all that is fine, generous and decent in the human heart. At this critical hour our beloved country, so kind to us in the day of prosperity, now out of the depths of adversity and unkind fortune, calls us to duty and high resolve in another war, a war against hunger, need, poverty and pain. Under the benign influence and inspiration of the Community Chest, we are called to the colors. Under the banner of charity, every man, woman and child, rich and poor alike, are asked to respond to the call of human needs.

"This call for service that reaches us from the outside, addresses itself to the better angels of our nature. It comes to us freighted with the tears of anguish and the distress of those men, women and children upon whom the Community Chest has poured its rich gifts of charity. That call that comes to us from hospital and the homes of the poor, knocks, knocks, knocks at the gates of our heart and calls us to help and to give."

Japanese Admiral Change At Shanghai Hailed by Pratt

By EDWARD T. FOLLIARD.

What caused the removal of Admiral Koichi Shiozowa, who until yesterday was in command of the Japanese forces storming Shanghai?

As is its custom, Tokyo gave no explanation. It simply announced that Admiral Shiozowa was being succeeded by Admiral Kichi Saburo Nomura, formerly naval attache of the Japanese Embassy here in Washington.

There are some who believe that Admiral Shiozowa was removed because he had failed in his mission; that is, that he had failed to take over Shanghai in the manner in which Japanese are accustomed to take over a Chinese city—quickly and effectively.

There are others who think it was because of the wild bombings from the air, and the resultant slaughter of women and children, a deed that has aroused the world.

Some officials here saw in the change an omen of peace. Their hypothesis was this: The Japanese are ready to abandon their siege of Shanghai. Obviously, Admiral Shiozowa, having directed the bombings and aroused the ire of all elements in the city, is hardly the man to do the negotiating. Hence the ointment of Nomura, who is known as a statesman as well as a sea fighter.

Whatever the cause, the appointment of Admiral Nomura reaulted in the issuance of a most unusual statement here.

Admiral William V. Pratt, chief of naval operations, hailed the selection of Nomura.

"I take pleasure in stating," said Admiral Pratt, "that no appointment could give me greater personal satisfaction than this, for I know Nomura as a friend of long standing, dating from the World War.

"He is not only a most able naval officer, but he is a statesman of caliber, having served a long apprenticeship as aid to Baron Kato, one of the finest characters and foremost liberal statesmen of his day.

"If any naval man can help clear up this tense situation in Shanghai, I feel that a better choice could not be made than the appointment of Nomura to handle this difficult situation."

New Brand of Chinese.

If, as some believe, Admiral Shiozowa was deposed because he fell down on his assignment, it is only fair to point out that, in the Shanghai adventure, the Japanese ran into a new brand of Chinese fighting.

The gallant battle the Chinese have put up against the well-armed, well-trained Japanese marines and bluejackets has been a revelation to military men here.

In Tokyo it must have produced a distinct shock. The high command, no doubt, felt that the taking over of Shanghai would be an easy exploit. Had not a comparatively small Japanese force swept the whole of Manchuria? Had not the Chinese retreated in every battle?

Rating of Chinese.

In the various war colleges of the world, where the strategists get together, and, among other things, evaluate the strength of a potential enemy, the individual Chinese soldier is placed far toward the bottom of the list, if, indeed, he is not placed at the very bottom.

He is poorly trained, and poorly equipped. But, worst of all, he is generally lacking in that essential quality—esprit de corps.

Certainly the Japanese had good reason to look down on the Chinese as fighters. Within a few months a small force of the mikado's soldiers—about 26,000—drove a Chinese army of 400,000 before them and took over 200,000 square miles of Chinese territory in Manchuria.

Taking of Chinchow.

In taking the important City of Chinchow, the Japanese invaders did not so much as lift a rifle. The Chinese forces had fled, although the Nanking government had ordered the leaders to "hold Chinchow to the last man."

Nor were these repeated retreats the only basis of the scorn with which the Japanese regarded the Chinese. There was the so-called "reward," or "bonus" system employed by the Chinese generals.

Just before the Japanese reached Chinchow, Marshal Chang Hsueh-Liang, the commander, offered a series of rewards to his men. To the brigade which held out against a force of superior strength for a day and a night, Marshal Chang offered a reward of $15,000. To anybody of his men who captured a Japanese cannon would go rewards from $500 to $10,000—the sum depending on the size of the field piece.

System Astounds Japanese.

The Japanese were astounded by such a system. They themselves need no reward to send them into action. Regarding the emperor as a deity, they are always ready to fight and die for him.

And so, with these things in the background, the Japanese military leaders had good reason to think that the taking of Shanghai would be an easy exploit.

Well, they have been trying to subjugate Shanghai for a week now, and the siege is still on. True, the Japanese have only a small force, but that is all that they thought would be necessary.

ADMIRAL NOMURA

JAPAN REJECTS ONE POINT

of their desires for peace by removing the former admiral in charge of the operations around Shanghai, Koichi Shiozawa, and replacing him with the very popular and esteemed Admiral Kichisaburo Nomura, formerly Naval Attache at the Japanese Embassy here, and personal friend of Admiral William V. Pratt, chief of naval operations, and William R. Castle, jr., the Undersecretary of State, who was formerly special Ambassador to Japan.

The story of the peace intervention will probably be remembered in history as a classic example of the modern diplomacy. From the inception of the peace proposal in the White House to its presentation to both governments, there was a lapse of exactly 22 hours.

President Hoover was reading the newspapers in the White House after dinner on Sunday. He noticed a dispatch from Tokyo in which the Japanese Foreign Minister Kenkichi Yoshizawa was represented as expressing a desire for peace overtures from the neutral powers. The President called Secretary of State Stimson on the telephone and asked him if there were any corroborative telegrams in the department to this effect. None had been received Sunday night.

Two Peace Overtures.

The following morning before breakfast, Secretary Stimson called the code room at the State Department to see if any peace overtures had been received during the night and received an affirmative reply. There were two, one from the Japanese and another from the Chinese, both transmitted formally by the American diplomatic missions at Tokyo and Nanking.

Then follows an interesting chronological account:

Cooperation of Britain.

11 a. m.—Prime Minister MacDonald called Secretary Stimson from London promising enthusiastic British cooperation.

12 noon—Secretary Stimson drafts the peace proposal and submits it to the approval of the French, British and Italians.

4 p. m.—Secretary Stimson receives approval from the Allies and the note is coded.

6 p. m.—Identic telegrams dispatched to Tokyo and Nanking containing the American proposal.

The extending of good offices has been an accepted practice of international procedure and is in no sense a diplomatic ultimatum, an intrusion in the affairs of other nations or an implied threat.

Growing Cause of Concern.

In their conversations between London and Washington Prime Minister MacDonald and Secretary Stimson were unanimous that the moment of decisive action had arrived. The spirit of recklessness and lawlessness in the streets of Shanghai was a growing cause of concern to the British and American commanders. Hundreds of irregular Chinese and Japanese civilians were roaming the streets under cover of darkness armed with shotguns or revolvers and menacing the lives of neutrals in their guerrilla warfare from modern office buildings in the International Settlement. These snipers were without any unified control or discipline and were responsible for a very considerable portion of the deaths reported in Shanghai. To remedy this perilous situation the peace making efforts of the United States and Great Britain were mobilized.

The full text of the peace proposals was presented to the Japanese Foreign Minister by American Ambassador W. Cameron Forbes at 5 o'clock yesterday morning, Washington time, but 6 o'clock in the evening in Tokyo. He and British Ambassador Sir Francis Lindley called on the Japanese foreign minister and presented individually their concurrent proposal of peace.

Taking Same Steps.

At almost the same time the British minister at Nanking was taking the same steps with the Nationalist government representatives. Consul General Edwin C. Cunningham acted for the United States. Just as the American and British emissaries were leaving the foreign office, the French Ambassador, Count de Martel, was arriving on the same mission.

The articles of peace are as follows:

First—Cessation of hostilities and violence on both sides at once;

Second—No further mobilization or preparation for hostilities;

Third—Withdrawal of all combatants, Chinese as well as Japanese, from all area of mutual contact in Shanghai;

Fourth—Protection of the International Settlement by the establishment of neutral zones to divide the combatants; the policing of these zones to be made by neutrals, and not either Japanese or Chinese; the arrangements to be set up by the consular authorities.

Settlement of Rows.

Fifth—As soon as these conditions are complied with, speedy preparations to be made for the settlement of all outstanding controversies between the two nations in the spirit of the Kellogg-Briand Pact and the resolution of the League of Nations of December 9, without at the same time any prior demand or reservation and with the aid of neutral observers or participants. This is the league council's resolution approved by Ambassador Dawes on behalf of the United States December 10, in Paris.

It was pointed out here yesterday that there is nothing new or extraneous in the peace proposal. Four of the propositions have already been the subject of the consular negotiations in Shanghai to no effect, and the fifth merely expresses what the other nations themselves are trying to do.

Precedent was also invoked in providing for the appointment of neutral observers, for it was recalled by Secretary Stimson that at the time the Shantung incident threatened to disrupt the organization of peace in the Far East ten years ago, a board of neutrals brought about amicable adjustment of the controversy.

The Japanese Ambassador Katsuji Debuchi made his daily visit to the State Department for an exchange of news and denied that the Japanese government had ordered further Japanese landing forces to either Shanghai or Nanking. He was enthusiastic about the appointment of his friend, Admiral Momura, as chief of the Japanese forces in Shanghai and on the Yangtze.

When some newsman ventured to inquire what would happen to his predecessor, Admiral Shiozawa, under whose direction the hostilities of the Japanese had been carried on recently, the ambassador replied:

"He will probably be sent to the General Board."

Tokyo Exchange Closed.

Behind the lines where the real financial wars are fought there was a notable tendency to kite the "war baby" stocks at the very moment when bear raids on the Japanese stocks and securities of all kinds was in progress. The response to war news was sluggish, however, and the big development of the day was the closing of the Tokyo Stock Exchange and the Yokohama Silk Exchange.

Japanese purchases of cotton, which has been quietly accumulating for some time, fell off sharply, and the action of a group of Columbia University professors in demanding a Japanese silk boycott caused a sharp decline in the price of all Japanese commodities.

The boycott which China has so effectively applied to all Japanese commerce since the beginning of the Manchurian campaign has had a disastrous effect on all Japanese purchases and sales. Removal of the boycott was the purpose of the present Japanese incursion at Shanghai, although the result is far from reached.

Little prospects that Japan could float a loan in either London or Wall street were expressed in authoritative financial circles here. It was deemed eminently possible that some form of internal financial help might be conscripted, as was done in Germany near the end of the war, but with the present state of international economic conditions, any foreign financing for Japan is looked upon as extremely unlikely.

Man Arrested After Car Crash.

James Hall, colored, of South Washington, Va., was arrested yesterday by Maryland State policemen on charges that he failed to make a written report of the accident several weeks ago in which Mrs. Bertha Caywood, of Boulevard Heights, Md., was killed.

GREATER GAS RATE REDUCTION SOUGHT

District Officials Will Ask Aid for Small Consumer; Wood Files Card.

District officials indicated yesterday they will attempt to bring about a greater reduction in gas rates for the small, domestic consumer after George A. G. Wood, president of the Washington Gas Light Co., had submitted a schedule of rates designed to save consumers $211,508 annually, to the Public Utilities Commission.

People's Counsel Richmond B. Keech said he had not had an opportunity to study the proposals, but that he probably will have something to say later. Indications are that efforts will be made at the public hearing to shift some of the weight of reductions from the commercial to the domestic services.

Approximately $100,000 saving will be effected by the domestic gas users, according to the company's tabulations, whereas $110,000 will be saved by the commercial consumers. The greater reductions, moreover, in the domestic schedules will go to the large users.

Small Consumer Unaffected.

No saving will accrue to the small household consumer who uses less than 1,000 cubic feet of gas a month under the new schedules, as the initial rate of $1 remains the same. There are 25,752 such customers. After the first 1,000 feet the new rate would be at the rate of 90 cents for the next 4,000, 85 cents for the next 45,000, and 80 cents per 1,000 feet for all in excess of 50,000 cubic feet. The present rate is 90 cents for each 1,000 feet in excess of 1,500.

The 61,670 customers who use between 1,000 and 5,000 cubic feet of gas will save only about 5 cents a month or a total of $37,000 during the year under the proposed schedules. The 18,537 customers who use from 5,000 to 50,000 cubic feet would save about 25 cents a month each or a total of $55,283. The 68 customers who use 50,000 or more cubic feet would save $9.65 cents a month or $7,879 altogether.

The company proposes to introduce two new rate schedules for apartment house owners. Schedule E would be for the use of gas in heating water for tenants, whereas Schedule F would be for owners who provide gas to tenants for heating or refrigeration.

Summer Charge Abolished.

The house-heating schedule is unchanged save that the $4 charge during summer months is abolished. A second charge of $1.50 for disconnecting services in use for less than a year is also abolished. The two effect a saving of $10,750 a year.

Reduced rates for small commercial consumers are: 90 cents per 1,000 cubic feet for the first 25,000 feet a month; 85 cents for the next 75,000 feet, and 80 cents for all over 100,000.

Schedule D, for large commercial users, is 92½ cents per 1,000 cubic feet for the first 50 feet used in one month per foot of maximum hourly use, 77½ cents for all over that and up to 400,000 total monthly use, 65 cents up to 1,000,000 cubic feet, 50 cents for the next 1,000,000 and 40 cents for all over 2,000,000 feet used monthly.

PLANE SOUGHT

14 MISSING, 2 PILOTS ARE DEAD IN STORMS

(Associated Press.)

Storms battering American airways on a far-flung front have brought death to two pilots, serious injury to another, and left the fate of fourteen other persons and three planes in doubt.

Lowell Rust, 34, air mail pilot, was found late yesterday at the edge of a swamp, where he had lain injured for 17 hours, wrapped in a parachute which probably saved his life, both by breaking his fall and protecting him from cold and snow.

The wreckage of his plane was about 100 feet away in the swamp, which is 3 miles north of Marcellus, Mich.

Another mail pilot, John W. Sharpnack, Oakland-Salt Lake City flier, was killed Tuesday when his ship crashed in a snowstorm near Rio Vista, Calif. The other death occurred at Laredo, Tex., Monday night. Albert Devore, Army aviation mechanic, died from injuries received in the 200-foot crash of his home-made plane.

Reports that wreckage of a giant air liner of the Century-Pacific Co., which disappeared last Friday with eight persons aboard, had been found 5 miles from Castaic, Calif., were disproved late Tuesday. Company fliers, who streaked to the scene on receiving reports that two pilots had observed the wreckage, found the debris of a burned house.

An Army airplane with Lieuts. William A. Cocke, jr., and Edward D. Hoffman aboard, left Crissy Field, San Francisco, for Los Angeles Monday, and the plane and Hoffman vanished in a storm. Cocke jumped to safety with a parachute and was found by Sequoia National Park rangers.

Miami, Fla., Feb. 2 (U.P.).—Twenty-four hours after the Bimini Airways Fairchild monoplane disappeared en route from Miami to Bimini names of the four passengers accompanying Pilot Val Chick on the flight were unrevealed tonight.

Illegal Entry Ends Rum Charge.

Holding that the Federal dry agents who arrested him had no right to enter his home, United States Commissioner J. Frank Parran yesterday dismissed charges of possession of liquor made against Nelson Mason, colored, of Leonardtown, Md. The agents said they had information Mason had a still in his house, but had no warrant. They did not find the still, but found eight gallons of alleged whisky. Mason objected to their entry.

MELLON'S TAX PLAN CALLED INADEQUATE

Crisp Says More Extensive Spread of Levies Will Be Imperative.

(United Press.)

An even more extensive spread of taxes than proposed by Secretary of Treasury Mellon is necessary to balance the budget, Acting Chairman Charles R. Crisp, of the tax-writing ways and means committee, announced yesterday.

"The budget must be balanced or economic chaos will follow," he warned in asking witnesses before the committee, who were protesting proposed taxes on oil imports and illuminating gas, to suggest some way in which the Government can increase its revenue to meet the prospective $2,000,000,000 deficit.

Crisp disclosed that Undersecretary of Treasury Ogden Mills has conceded that, on the basis of latest revenues, the Treasury's own program would not produce the $920,000,000 estimated last December. Crisp estimated the Treasury's tax program would fall short of this figure by $250,000,000 to $300,000,000.

The statement was believed to indicate an intention to increase the scope of the tax bill which the Democratic majority of the House started Monday to write.

Nearly a score of witnesses yesterday opposed the proposed oil import taxes. They represented steamship owners, oil importing companies, farm federations, taxicab owners and the asphalt industry, and all of them complained that the oil tax would increase the price of gasoline and hurt their interests.

Frank A. K. Boland, New York, representing the American Hotel Association, appealed for legalization of beer, and a tax on it, to meet part of the Government's financial problem.

The Senate finance committee brought out a resolution by Senator David A. Reed (Republican), of Pennsylvania, to direct the Tariff Commission to investigate the effect of foreign currency depreciation on United States imports, a measure which carries possibilities of increasing the present tariff rates to cut down imports.

Attendance Marks Made at Auto Show

All Tuesday attendance records at the auto show were topped last night when 6,500 persons crowded in Washington Auditorium. Last night's gift automobile went to Mrs. Hazel R. Peter, of 802 Florida avenue.

The car Mrs. Peter won was a four-door Studebaker sedan. She was not in the hall when the result of the drawing was announced, but was informed later by telephone. She is employed at the Review & Herald Publishing Co. She and her husband, Julian Peter, at present possess a Nash car.

To date, with the ending of the first four days of the show, attendance is 150 per cent over last year's similar period. Tonight's prize car will be a De Soto two-door sedan.

JAPANESE TROOPS ARE OFF TO HARBIN

Changchun, Manchuria, Feb. 2 (A. P.).—Gen. Jiro Tamon, the bespectacled and professorial little leader, who captured Tsitsihar and Kowpangtze, moved his veteran troops from Changchun today toward Harbin.

The troop movement was started in weather 30 degrees below zero Fahrenheit, and there was a blinding snowstorm, but, despite these adverse conditions 2,000 Japanese residents of Changchun cheered the departing soldiers.

Gen. Tamon's objective is to drive out of Harbin the Chinese forces of Gen. Ting Chao. He operated under orders from Gen. Shigeru Honjo, Japanese high commander, who has warned Ting that the Japanese are determined to protect foreign lives and property from warring Chinese factions in Harbin.

One brigade entrained from Changchun today and another, under Gen. Amano, is leaving tomorrow. The entire expeditionary force, totaling about 13,000 men, is expected to enter Harbin by Friday.

One Japanese brigade already has taken position south of Harbin. Dispatches from the field indicated that Ting's command was disintegrating, but it was reported that he still had 10,000 men and that he was determined to stop the Japanese advance.

In addition to considerable infantry forces, Gen. Tamon has several batteries of artillery, a unit of engineers and a ground crew for his air squadron.

SHANGHAI FIGHTING UNDER WAY AGAIN

emplacements in the Hongkew area, manning each stronghold with bluejackets equipped with rifles and machine guns.

These strong points, it was explained, were put out in preparation for the expected Chinese major offensive.

Meanwhile it was reported the International Settlement Defense Council, composed of the military commanders of the various foreign troops here, had handed the Japanese authorities a protest against independent military action within the settlement.

It was understood the settlement municipal council had demanded the restoration of the municipal government in Hongkew, where the Japanese military have assumed uncontested control, throwing out of gear all the normal government machinery.

Starts Burning Again.

Chapel started burning again last night during the bombardment. The Japanese declared they had won out in the exchange of shells. The Chinese command declared "We intend to drive the enemy out of Chinese territory."

Some of the Chinese lines fell back at the conclusion of the exchange of fire. Japanese officers said their guns had been trained on strong defense works picked up by airmen who have made repeated scouting flights over the city.

Americans, British, French, and Italian troops, strung along the borders of the International Settlement behind barbed-wire entanglements and sandbag barricades, had orders to stop any attempt of the combatants to break through in case the big rush developed.

50,000 Take Refuge.

Thousands of refugees streamed through the passageways left in the barbed wire. Police estimated that more than 50,000 persons have taken refuge in the settlement since the Chapei fighting started.

All stores in the settlement were closed, but the streets were jammed. Settlement authorities declared the food supply was sufficient for the present.

More than 3,000 foreign residents, both men and women, have been enrolled in various defense organizations. The women volunteered for service in motor corps similar to the units with the allies during the World War, and the men offered themselves to bear guns.

The British placed a string of out posts running into Chinese territory along the western boundary of the settlement. The purpose of this move was to protect extensive foreign property in that area.

American Marines on Duty.

The American Marines remained on duty along the Soochow Creek, the other side of which was held by China. There was danger that if driven to retreat the Chinese might be forced to cross the river against the American line.

All the commanders of the foreign forces in the settlement protested to their consular officials that Japanese forces attached to the international garrison were infringing on sectors allotted to the Americans, British and Italians.

Charges of Brutality.

Charges of brutality were made against the Japanese. One such charge was that bluejackets had bayoneted a 16-year-old Chinese boy who picked up a rock and gestured as though he intended to throw it at a Japanese patrol.

Chinese municipal officials said any move to restore peace in the Far East without infringing upon the sovereignty and dignity of China would be welcomed. It was forecast that China would return a blanket acceptance to the offer of the cooperating powers of proposals to end hostilities.

Tokyo Situation Causes Debuchi to Cancel Fete

New York, Feb. 2 (A.P.).—Katsuji Debuchi, Japanese Ambassador to the United States, who was to have been the chief guest and principal speaker at the annual dinner of the Japan Society here tomorrow night, has notified the society that because of the serious situation in Shanghai which requires him to keep in close touch with the U. S. Department of State, he will be unable to attend the dinner.

The announcement, made today in behalf of the Japan Society, also stated that in view of the ambassador's inability to attend at this time, the dinner would be postponed until such time as the ambassador can be present.

WHERE AMERICANS ARE IN CHINA

from the warships in the Whangpoo, bringing the total Japanese strength to approximately 5,000.

British Troops Arrive.

A battalion of British troops arrived on the cruiser Berwick and was landed on the Bund of the International Settlement. Arrival of the United States cruiser Houston, bringing more American Marines, was eagerly awaited. She was due at 2 p. m.

Frantic thousands of Chinese refugees appeared again at dawn today. They rushed along the waterfront from the Garden Bridge southward along the settlement side of the Wangpoo for miles, waiting an opportunity to cross the river into what they hoped was safer Chinese territory.

Today's newspaper headlines said the "truce was broken" by yesterday's hostilities. They said that unrestrained fighting now was likely. As a matter of fact, there had been little evidence of a truce in recent days.

Strengthen Positions.

Japanese strengthened their positions in the Hongkew area during the night, set up more machine gun nests and sent heavier patrols around the Japanese consulate. There was a grim note as a squad of Japanese bluejackets blew a last salute on their bugles for a number of dead comrades who were being loaded on a warship.

A Chinese shell splashed into the Whangpoo close to a cluster of Japanese warships off the northern extremity of the Bund, near the Japanese consulate. Japanese bombing planes watched the bombardment below through a lifting fog, but themselves sent down no bombs. A new fire broke out in Chapel.

Moved Toward Marines.

The heavy artillery firing caused Chinese in Chapel to move toward the American defense lines along the northwest boundaries of the International Settlement in greater numbers. United States Marines thereupon strengthened their defenses along the south bank of Soochow Creek and brought up additional machine guns. Three corps of Shanghai volunteers in armored cars also went into the sector.

During the artillery duel shells from a Japanese mortar fell near British volunteer units within the International Settlement. No casualties were reported.

Japanese Shell Chapel.

Japanese 18-pound guns poured a rain of shells on Chapel during yesterday afternoon from positions behind the butts of the Hongkew Park rifle range.

The Japanese began to mobilize a force of about 2,000 bluejackets, and it was expected that the bombardment would be followed by an attack, but no advance materialized. The day's work was left to the guns.

At 6:30 p. m. the Japanese put their heavy pieces into action, drowning out the noise of machine guns and lighter artillery, and the trench mortars of the Chinese.

When the firing died down only the Chinese gun heard from was a long trench mortar with a range of about 2,000 yards.

The Japanese set up 38 or more barbed wire barricades and sand bag in the Far East should be allowed to continue. * * * Shanghai is the scene of a series of conflicts in which rifles, machine guns, artillery and airplanes are taking part. War in everything but name is in progress."

Informed persons asserted that the negotiations for the concerted move had been in progress in Washington for several days, with the British Ambassador acting for the government of Prime Minister MacDonald.

Mr. Thomas was not explicit about the use of American troops, but he said that the proposed neutral zone "would have to be occupied by the troops of the neutral powers which have forces in the International Settlement," and one of these powers is the United States.

France and Italy Act.

Andre Tardieu, French minister of war, and Foreign Minister Dino Grandi, of Italy, briefly announced that their governments had sent instructions about the peace proposals to their representatives at Tokyo and Nanking with a view of taking the steps indicated by Mr. Thomas.

Dr. Weizsacker, the German spokesman, said he would immediately inform his government so that it would "be able to take any measures necessary in order forthwith to convey adequate instructions to its diplomatic representatives in the two capitals."

M. Sato, who arose after Mr. Thomas had sat down and lighted his pipe, said he was glad to hear the important statements made by the British and the other representatives.

"I am particularly glad," he continued, "because it was we ourselves, the Japanese government, who asked the representatives of Great Britain, the United States and France at Tokyo to take concerted action such as was required at Shanghai.

"In view of the very serious situation that exists in Shanghai, my government asked the representatives of those three governments to take any necessary measures at once.

"My government put forward that request without any hesitation. We felt that this was a time which called for exceptional measures."

The Japanese delegate's remarks seemed to surprise the spectators. There were audible gasps and laughter.

Will Require Several Days.

Action under the program outlined by Mr. Thomas will require several days to reach the definite stage. First Nanking and Tokyo must have time to make formal replies.

The delineation of the neutral zone will mean difficult negotiations. The authoritative view here was that the zone would be very thin at first and then gradually, by diplomatic pressure, backed by the presence of military forces, made wider and wider.

After the zone becomes a reality, in case the plan goes through, then the ultimate negotiations for settlement still will remain.

Coolidge's Second Oath, As Precaution, Described

A. A. Hoehling, Jr., Former Justice, Tells How He Swore in President to End Legal Uncertainty Caused by Rite Father Administered.

(Associated Press.)

Almost ten years after the incident, a former justice of the District of Columbia Supreme Court smiled reminiscently yesterday as he told how he administered a second presidential oath of office to Calvin Coolidge.

The traditional Coolidge silence surrounded the ceremony until it was related in a recent book by Harry M. Daugherty, Attorney General in the Harding and Coolidge administrations.

A. A. Hoehling, jr., now a Washington attorney, said yesterday the second oath was administered after the legality of the first had been questioned. It had been taken by lamplight in a New England farmhouse early on the August morning after the death of President Harding.

Col. John Coolidge, the President's father, administered the first oath, watching proudly as his son raised his hand. The elder Coolidge, now dead, was a justice of the peace and the point was made that he had authority to swear in only State officers.

Judge Hoehling said yesterday that in late August, 1923, he was approached by Daugherty, who told him Mr. Coolidge wished to take the oath again. The judge added that the reasons were not discussed, but that he understood it was a precautionary measure.

On the afternoon of August 21, Judge Hoehling received a call to go to the Willard Hotel, where President Coolidge had a suite during his term as Vice President.

Secret Service men admitted the justice to a room where the President was alone. A hotel Bible lay on a table. Without any formalities, the oath was administered. Mr. Coolidge smiled and said "Thank you." That was all.

"I've kept my mouth shut about it until today," laughed Judge Hoehling.

Since that time the law has been changed to give a State officer the unquestioned right to administer an oath to a Federal officer.

U. S. AND SOVIET SIT TOGETHER SILENTLY

Awkward Situations Foreseen at Geneva Because of Nonrecognition.

Moscow, Feb. 2 (A.P.).—Two of the world's largest nations face each other across the conference table at the Geneva disarmament pourparlers, but, unless the unexpecetd happens, they will be prevented from conducting any conversations because officially they are not on speaking terms.

Whether the absence of diplomatic relations between the United States and the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics, which acts as a bar even to the most informal intercourse, will effect the conference as a whole remains to be seen. Both officially and unofficially, however, neither country will recognize the presence of the other at the conference if diplomatic usage is followed.

Embarrassment Foreseen.

Since it is likely that most of the conference work will be done in private discussions by committees and exchanges of opinion among various delegations, the belief is held in foreign quarters here that the situation holds awkward potentialities for the two nations that are as deeply interested as any others in seeing the conference produce the most effective results.

After the Bolsheviks overthrew Kerensky's provisional government November 7, 1917, the United States refused to recognize the workers and peasants' republic on the broad grounds that it repudiated the country's international obligations by refusing to pay the debts of the provisional government and seizing foreign property, and that it engages in communistic propaganda.

This policy was enunciated first by Bainbridge Colby, Secretary of State in the Wilson administration, in August, 1920, and has been followed in general since that time.

Soviet Overtures Futile.

For a while the Bolsheviks were hopeful that this attitude would be modified. They made overtures on several occasions looking toward negotiations as a prelude to recognition of this country by the United States. But they bore no fruit and now the Soviet government appears to be reconciled to an indefinite continuation of the American policy, although they still profess to be unable to understand it.

A high official here declared that this government is not "building" on any hopes that a change will occur soon in the diplomatic impasse but that naturally a reversal of the American recognition policy would be welcomed here.

The Bolsheviks have learned by experience not to expect that a change in administrations necessarily means a change in American foreign policy.

Japan's Silk Trade Importance Cited

New York, Feb. 2 (A.P.).—The importance of Japan's silk trade, as a deterrent to any serious clash with the United States over the Chinese disturbances, was stressed today in New York financial circles.

A heavy fall in prices on the Yokohama raw silk exchange, attributed to pessimistic reports on the relations between Japan and America, recalled here that the late Premier Baron Kato, in the last exclusive interview he gave shortly before his death, told the Associated Press: "The United States is Japan's best customer. How can one go to war with one's best customer?"

Officials of the New York raw silk exchange, commenting on the suspension of trading in Yokohama following today's precipitous price slump in silk, pointed out that Japan sells approximately 90 per cent of her entire sericulture production to America.

Silk futures on the New York exchange broke about 5 cents a pound at the opening, but recovered practically all of their losses before the close, final bids ranging from $1.76 to $1.80 for active deliveries.

Two Italian Vessels To Go to War Zone

Nation's Interest in Shanghai Fourth in Importance Among Powers.

Rome, Feb. 2 (A.P.).—The Italian government announced today it was sending the cruiser Trento and a destroyer to cooperate with the naval forces of other nations at Shanghai.

The grave turn of events at Shanghai is of personal, as well as official interest to Premier Mussolini, as his daughter Edda, the wife of Count Galeazzo Ciano, lives in Shanghai. The count is charge d'affaires at the Italian Embassy.

The foreign office said Italy's part in the international action in China was "an effort in the interests of peace." It was disclosed that the Italian Ambassador at Tokyo had directed the attention of the Japanese government to the "danger and risk of disturbing the peace" by military operations in China.

Italy's interest in Shanghai is fourth in importance among the powers there. The regular Italian garrison at Shanghai was reinforced recently.

North Capitol Trolleys Tied Up for 40 Minutes

Street cars on the North Capitol street line of the Washington Railway & Electric Co. were tied up for about 40 minutes after 10 o'clock last night when the circuit between Fifth and G streets northwest and North Capitol street and New York avenue went out on the northbound tracks.

Five cars were halted near the circle at North Capitol and N streets and New York avenue. Two of them were northbound and were stopped when the current suddenly went off. Three southbound cars were held back there because one of those heading in the opposite direction had been caught so far on the curve that the southbound cars could not pass. A conduction rail is believed to have failed, causing the tie-up.

League Assembly Move In Shanghai Strife Seen

Geneva, Feb. 2. (A.P.).—Belief that the world disarmament conference which opened today would soon give way to an extraordinary session of the League of Nations Assembly to take action on the Sino - Japanese strife gained strength in international quarters today.

Gathering in the disarmament auditorium, delegates were frankly disturbed by the war-like aspects of the Far Eastern crisis.

Some of the smaller states represented at the gathering were known to be dissatisfied with the league council's handling of the problem, and therefore were pictured as anxious to lay it in the hands of the assembly. There the whole league membership has a speaking voice and equal vote.

rived and strode to the speakers' dais. Then brilliant lights flooded the tribune, throwing into shadow the most of delegates on the floor.

The American delegation occupied the sixth row from the front, at the center of the hall. Miss Mary Woolley, the only woman delegate from the United States, and one of five to occupy seats, sat next to Hugh Gibson, who occupied an aisle seat.

The most colorful figure in the assembly was the delegate from the Hedjaz, the Sheikh Hafiz Wahba, who was attired in the white robes of his national costume, with its crowning turban headdress.

Henderson's Solemn Words.

The British delegate, rapping lightly for order, began reading his address in a calm, unimpassioned voice. He summarized the progress of the peace movement since the formation of the League of Nations, reviewed the steps leading to such agreements as the Kellogg Pact and the Nine-Power Treaty, and spoke of recent preliminary efforts to create a spirit of disarmament.

"The problem of disarmament," he said, "is vitally relevant to the grave economic and financial situation for which most nations are at the moment trying to find a solution.

"The financial burden of armaments in past wars is indeed one of its contributory causes. It is one of the main causes of unbalanced budgets in a large number of countries."

Henderson's estimate of the average military expenditure in 61 nations during the last four or five years, he said, was "the immense sum of $4,000,000,000 annually."

Conference Quickly Organized.

"Can we doubt the popular welcome," he asked, "that would await definite steps in the direction of general disarmament? * * * All mankind is looking to this conference. I refuse to contemplate even the possibility of failure; but, if we fail, no one can foretell the evil consequences that might ensue."

The usual routine business attendant upon organization of the conference was rapidly accomplished. A credentials commission of five members was established, and a committee of procedure, consisting of sixteen members, of whom Henderson was made chairman and Theodore Marriner, American delegate, a member, was appointed.

Miss Woolley was appointed one of a committee of five for the consideration of peace petitions. It was announced these petitions, bearing some 6,000,000 names, would be presented to the conference at an extraordinary session Saturday, at which women leaders in the peace movement will be given an opportunity to speak.

Giuseppe Motta, of Switzerland, who welcomed the delegates on behalf of his country, was selected honorary president of the conference, and the session adjourned at 6:18 p. m. without fixing a date for the next meeting.

Accident Blamed In Tourist's Death

Potomac Park Camper Is Killed by Defective Gas Heater.

The death of Paul Richardson, 36-year-old Rome, Me., tourist, in a cabin at the Potomac Park Tourist Camp was declared by a coroner's jury yesterday to have been accidental as the "result of improper combustion in a gas heater, coupled with improper ventilation of the cabin."

Richardson's body was found by a camp attendant last Friday in the cabin occupied by him, all the doors and windows of which were shut tight. Capt. Ray C. Montgomery, of the Park Police, testified at the inquest yesterday that verbal and written notices were given all tourists occupying the cabins giving warning of the danger of the heaters.

Two deaths were found to have been caused last October by the same reasons assigned for Richardson's death. Installation of a steam-heating plant for the camp is now under way, Capt. Montgomery said, and use of the gas heaters has been discontinued.

BLUE FLEET SPEEDS TO HAWAIIAN 'FIGHT'

Armada 25 Miles Long, Led by Scout Cruiser, Moves in Defensive Screen.

Somewhere in the Pacific, Feb. 2 (A.P.).—The Blue Fleet, an armada covering an area of the Pacific Ocean 25 miles long and several miles wide, is moving toward Hawaii and a mock battle "to capture the islands."

It is Uncle Sam's main battle force of the Pacific, 65 ships, including transports of an Army and Marine expeditionary force.

Destroyers are the scouts. These hornets of the sea, in extended formation, cruise in a semicircular line 20 miles ahead of the three divisions of battleships — nine superdreadnaughts. The destroyers are on alert for submarine attack as well as watching the skies for air raiders.

Cruiser Detroit Leads.

Ten miles astern of the leading destroyers is the flagship of the destroyer divisions, the fast scout cruiser Detroit. Ten miles farther back is the defensive formation of battleships, two giant aircraft carriers, the Lexington and Saratoga, the train of supply ships, and the troop ships.

In three columns of divisions majestically move the nine superdreadnaughts, the great, gray, sleek sea fortresses. The battle force commander's flagship, U. S. S. California, leads the central column, slightly ahead of the flanking columns, while the supply ships and troop ships are in the sheltered convoy astern of the battleship formation.

Defensive Screen.

The destroyers are moving in what is known as the defensive screen. In weaving lines they cleave the blue waters so that no matter from what direction a submarine might appear, a destroyer would be in position to ram or torpedo or speed over it for attack with depth charges.

Scouting protection likewise is afforded by the aircraft squadrons aboard the Lexington and Saratoga, some 200 planes.

The glamor and thrill of adventure in the lives of men who go down to the sea in ships reached a zenith in the vast grandeur of evolutions of a great fleet cruising in battle drills. Onward it moves, perfecting itself for the instant it may need to strike, gliding through the trackless miles of blue waters.

Conference Plans Jobs for Disabled

Per Diem Posts in District Government Sought for This Spring.

Plans looking toward placing a percentage of disabled veterans in per diem jobs that will develop in the city government early in the spring was the subject of a conference at the District Building yesterday between District Commissioner Reichelderfer, National Commander E. C. Babcock of the Disabled American Veterans; John Arthur Shaw, of the Department of Labor, and W. C. Sorrells, of the Civil Service Commission.

The D. A. V. leader explained that in anticipation of broad unemployment during the winter the organization had opened a campaign last July to locate every service connected disabled man who was out of work. This canvass showed that 75,000 of these men were jobless and the reports to the first of this month indicated about 10,000 have been placed in jobs.

Commissioner Reichelderfer said that the city government was entirely sympathetic with any reasonable plan to assist the disabled and the matter is to be discussed later at the meeting of the District Commissioners when more details will be considered.

Burke Offers Plan In Primary Tangle

(Associated Press.)

Democratic cooperation was sought last night by a high Republican official to solve a problem facing Massachusetts authorities in selecting delegates to the national conventions.

James Francis Burke, general counsel for the Republican national committee, suggested in a statement that the Democratic committee alter its plans for the Massachusetts primary as a way out of the difficulty. He explained that under the call of the Republican committee the delegates to the Presidential convention must be elected under the new apportionment law while under the Democratic call they will be selected under the old apportionment law.

"In order to comply with both calls," he continued "Massachusetts authorities would have to conduct two sets of primaries on the same day, one in the sixteen old congressional districts and another in the fifteen new congressional districts. Massachusetts authorities declare this to be an impossibility."

BEWARE THE COUGH OR COLD THAT HANGS ON

Persistent coughs and colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the infected membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, bronchitis and other forms of respiratory diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold, no matter of how long standing, is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. (adv.)

WAR AND DISARMAMENT.

Events in the Far East have completely overshadowed the opening of the League of Nations' disarmament conference at Geneva. Delegates of 60 nations have assembled for the most pretentious conference on arms that has ever been held. But the spotlight of world interest is centered on the crisis in China. With war flaring in one section of the world it is very difficult to arouse enthusiasm for disarmament.

There is no actual connection, however, between the Far Eastern situation and the Geneva conference. A conflict between Japan and China does not menace the security of any European nation. The great powers look upon China's disorganized army, even though it includes about 2,500,000 men, with a feeling of sympathy for its impotence. Even Japan is not a great military power. Her regular army has only 230,000 men. When all of her 1,900,000 reserves are considered, Japan has only 2.5 per cent of her population under arms, compared with 14.8 per cent for France. Japan's belligerent mood does not by any means make it impractical for Europe to shake off its excessive armaments at the Geneva conference.

Russia is another potential source of trouble that is always referred to when the question of European disarmament is discussed. It is true that most countries are still suspicious of the Soviet, but the rampant march of bolshevism has been substantially checked. Russia has an army—active forces and reserves—of 5,000,000 men, but it is far less efficient than the armies of western Europe. In the sinews of war the Soviet is extremely weak. All the efforts of the Bolshevist government are required to keep the people from starvation under conditions of peace.

Furthermore, the question of national security is relative. If all nations now armed should agree to reduce their weapons of war proportionately, the same relative strength would be preserved, and each country would be able to strengthen its economic position. No nation will be asked at the disarmament conference to sacrifice its national defense. If the events in Shanghai imperiled in any way the national security of any nation that may be expected to take a leading part in the conference, the situation would be entirely different. But such is not the case. European armies could be substantially reduced without incurring any more risk of aggression than now exists.

The unfortunate thing about the coincidence between the Geneva conference and the Sino-Japanese crisis is that the latter event may be used as a convenient excuse for maintaining excessive armaments in Europe. In reality the demands of France for a security pact in return for an agreement to reduce armaments is the most formidable problem with which the conference must wrestle. But some countries that are not in favor of reducing their arms may try to hide their recalcitrance behind the Shanghai incident.

Only those countries which fail to provide adequate national defense are in a precarious position as a result of the Oriental conflict and the general unrest abroad in the world. Congress is somewhat apprehensive because it has failed to build the American navy up to treaty limits, and because the United States has the smallest army, on a population basis, of any nation in the world. If Congress should now suddenly order expansion of the army and construction of war vessels, even though they are provided for under the London naval treaty, that action might be misunderstood. There is a distinct weakness in allowing this country to lag behind its treaty strength until a foreign war threatens.

Not one major country in Europe occupies this position, however. Europe is overarmed far more than the United States is underarmed. The restoration of a balance is imperative. If those countries are anxious to relieve their people of the crushing burden of supporting vast armies, they will pay little attention to the flare-up in China. Events in China are only remotely related to the problem before the conference. Its task is almost wholly European.

TOO MANY FILLING STATIONS.

More than $455,000,000 is wasted annually in duplication and excessive competition of the gasoline industry, without compensating benefit to motorists. Service stations are warranted in a total of 6,351 towns and cities of the country, of which 5,519 are greatly overbuilt with regard to retail outlets, according to Glen B. Winship, who has been active in the petroleum industry for fifteen years and has just completed a two-year survey of the marketing conditions of gasoline throughout the country. He estimates that the capital invested in unnecessary distributing plants exceeds $1,000,000,000, which entails a loss in all branches of the industry of almost 4 per cent annually on the total investment.

Before the period of this unwarranted expansion the average allowance to dealers was 2 cents a gallon. Today the average is not less than 4 cents and in some stations it is considerably more. This does not include the spread between the tank-wagon and service station prices, but only the rise between the net price paid by the dealer and the retail price, exclusive of tax. Tank wagon deliveries must be calculated separately as having advanced 1½ cents a gallon. The main cause of this rise is due to the effects of overbuilding, which has steadily reduced the average gallonage of the individual stations.

Analysis of conditions in every town of the United States having a population of 1,000 or more convinced Mr. Winship that villages having less than 400 motor vehicles seldom warranted a service station, because in such communities the car owners can be adequately served by the local garages. Even in larger cities the service stations should not exceed one to every 400 vehicles. The objection is raised that this takes no account of through or transient trade. The best answer to this is to cite the example of Jersey City and Newark, each of which is a natural gateway to a heavy stream of traffic; yet each of these cities has more than 400 motor vehicles to the service station.

The chief blame for this Nation-wide condition, according to Mr. Winship, should be placed on the abnormal competitive system. A solution is possible, and he believes that the industry will find it. Otherwise, the undertaking will be done from the outside, and the means may not be so acceptable to the petroleum interests.

THE PAY CUT FIASCO.

Legislation to reduce the salaries of Federal employes has been virtually abandoned. Only Senator Borah persists in his attempt to find a committee that will consider his bill. But since no committee in which it could receive a favorable hearing is disposed to accept the measure, it seems to be a dead issue already. The senator would do well to withdraw it.

A bit of research by the Budget Bureau put the pay slashers to rout. The bureau discovered that the Government employs 732,460 employes under the civil service regulations with an average salary of $1,441 per year. The average is so low as to provide a minimum living wage. The thought of trimming 5 or 10 per cent from such salaries is repulsive to the American sense of fair play.

The average Government salary for civil service positions almost equals the present average income of persons gainfully employed throughout the country. In 1930 the per capita income, according to the National Industrial Conference Board, was $578. But only about 40 per cent of the population is gainfully employed. Dividing the national income among them, it amounts to $1,445 for the average worker in 1930 and $1,753 in 1929. This suggests that Government salaries are already on a depression basis without being reduced.

It should be noted also that most of the services rendered by Government employes are skilled, while this average for the country as a whole includes millions of unskilled workers. When all factors are taken into consideration the salaries of Government workers are astonishingly low.

The limited number of large salaries is also remarkable. Only 4,736 officials draw more than $5,000 per year, excluding congressmen, judges, and a few other scattered officers. Congress could not save enough by trimming these salaries to pay its meager contribution to the District of Columbia's budget. It is to be hoped that the fiasco of cutting salaries to reduce the deficit will pass without further encroachment upon the morale of loyal Government workers.

LIMIT OUTPUT TO MARKET.

Business leaders throughout the country are turning their attention as never before to the relative importance and greater stability of the American home market as compared with international trade. It is a question that has often been discussed in these columns, and there can be no question of the soundness of the arguments in favor of the opportunities offered by the great buying power of America. The intense rivalries among European nations, not only in erecting tariff barriers, but in establishing industries with the purpose of becoming as self-contained as possible, make the case plainer than ever.

American export trade in 1929 amounted to more than $5,000,000,000 in value. Last year the figures show a decline of about 40 per cent, though when corrected for lower price levels the reduction is only one-half, and figured in volume the falling off is about 15 per cent. Even 40 per cent of $5,000,000,000 is only $2,000,000,000. A 10 per cent increase in American business exceeds that amount three times over.

There are a few lines, particularly among American raw products, that are produced greatly in excess of home-market requirements. Their price is fixed by the foreign demand for this excess fraction of the total. For many lines it now becomes a question for serious consideration as to whether the producers would not be better off if they limited their output to the requirements of American consumers.

In the field of agriculture there has been no question as to the wisdom of the advice to reduce acreage for crops that are a drug on both domestic and world markets. The same principle must be applied to manufacturing industries. The machine has outstripped consuming power. For several decades the increasing output, and the cheapness of machine-made goods, transformed many things from luxuries to everyday necessities, and made them available for many more millions of users. Labor displaced by machines applied to old trades readily found work on machines that made new things.

The impetus to production following the war, when all stocks were depleted, caused universal overexpansion. The collapse of 1929 has been followed by more than two years of depression and now, with numerous indications that the bottom has been reached and business is ready to begin a gradual ascent, it is advisable to consider some realities of conditions as they exist today and as they will doubtless remain for some time to come.

There is little prospect that the full flood of foreign trade, particulary as measured in dollars, can be restored in the near future. Prices are definitely lower. Foreign competition in both manufactures and agricultural products is greater than ever before, and many foreign countries are too poor to be good customers when they must pay with depreciated currency.

The United States, on the other hand, with returning confidence and activity, is in a position today to recover its normal volume of business without great delay. In much better shape economically and financially than any other nation, the home market offers greater opportunity than the rest of the nations of the world combined. But it should be cultivated with proper consideration of its consuming power. Overexpanded plants must be restricted, just as wheat and cotton acreage and flowing oil wells must be reduced. If working hours on overly productive machines must be shortened and employment spread to absorb the jobless that, too, can be worked out for the benefit of all. The American market is big enough to afford a comfortable living to all Americans.

LA FOLLETTE'S DOLE.

When Senator La Follette undertakes to argue for a dole, his logic is irresistible. In support of a measure devised by himself and Senator Costigan the Wisconsin insurgent tells the Senate that 305 out of 520 cities polled by the manufacturing committee are in favor of a handout from Uncle Sam. How can the Senate hesitate when confronted with such convincing evidence? Can Congress be so thick-headed as to deny a dole to municipalities when more than half of them want it?

On the same theory it may be assumed that Senator La Follette is opposed to higher taxes. Every prospective taxpayer who has testified upon the subject has asked to be relieved of any greater burden. Surely, if the senator makes a policy of extending a handout to every agency that asks for it he must be equally considerate of those who ask only that their burdens shall not be increased.

The surprising thing is that so many mayors were able to resist the senator's invitation to unload their responsibilities upon Uncle Sam. When a municipality proudly refuses Federal charity and prefers to rely upon its own resources it suggests that there is something fundamentally distasteful about a Government dole. But when it reaches out for a gratuity it merely follows the course of least resistance.

Mr. La Follette might have spared the Senate from his recital of the deplorable conditions which exist in some parts of the country. What does he suppose would happen if the efforts of the States, the cities and private agencies were suspended and the people in distress were left to the mercy of his proposed dole? Certainly, the senator must realize that as soon as Uncle Sam assumed responsibility for local charity the agencies now handling that work would withdraw in his favor. What would then be the fate of the unemployed?

The sum which the senator proposes to make available for two years would amount to about $50 or $60 for the family of every wage earner who is without work. Within a few weeks local institutions would be demanding more. There would be no end to the drain upon the depleted Treasury. If Congress once admitted its responsibility for local relief it would be expected to finance a Nation-wide dole system which might never be abolished.

Senator Glass is pressing a bill to stop market speculation. Why not an amendment to include political speculation?

One of the problems in politics is to get to the people. Another is to keep the people from getting the politicians.

APPLE PIE

From the Los Angeles Times.

Of all our national food dishes none lingers in fond recollection as persistently as the pie. Mince pie was glorious; pumpkin pie was grand, but both were seasonal, as was the truly remarkable blueberry pie, the rhubarb pie, the gooseberry pie and the cherry pie. But the apple pie stayed with us as a welcome friend and gustatory delight around the year. Steaming hot, exuding odors of nutmeg and cinnamon, or cold and thrilling, to be partaken of at night, it left no digestive qualms behind. A generous piece—maybe two pieces—just before retiring invoked sweet slumber.

Today, alas, apple pie has degenerated into a bakery product—not bad, you understand, but not up to its past apex of achievement. One apple pie is as like to another apple pie as two green peas in the same pod.

Worse still, some aspiring amateur conceived the idea of a "French apple pie." What do the French know about apple pie? And these imitators, forgetting the great heritage of their ancestors, form a base of some sort of crumbs, pile on canned apple and bake the thing. The result is neither pie nor pudding.

Are we unworthy of our forbears? Are we too dull of apprehension to realize the merit of our own, our native pie? Must we even in this ape foreigners and foreign fashions?

No doubt a Frenchman prefers French cookery; no doubt a Briton considers his roast of beef the best—maybe it is. To the German the worthy sauerkraut; to the Russian, vodka-flavored tea; to the Bulgarian, goulash; to the Chinese, bird's-nest soup; to the Eskimo, walrus blubber. We do not criticize their tastes. Some of their food is good and deserves a place.

Let us throw off the shackles that are being insidiously riveted on our limbs (or should we say stomachs?) Let us turn back to the foods that made our parents great. Let us demand in home and restaurant, in hotel dining room and cafeteria runway, pie, apple pie—American green apple pie—not the kind that somebody thinks is like what a French chef might concoct in an unguarded moment, but the kind that mother used to make!

POST HASTE.

Japan will learn that a war by any other name will smell—well, the nose knows.

And Japan should know that others have got into trouble playing the shell game that way.

Canton must begin to feel offended to appear so undesirbale to the invaders. Don't the Japs like ginger?

North China cities, having agreed to all Japanese demands, are now doubtless preparing to be bombarded.

"If Japan hadn't been armed she wouldn't have attacked China."—"If China had been armed Japan wouldn't have attacked her." The Geneva conference starts with a stalemate.

The retired but not retiring Gen. Butler says if the Japs find it expedient they will fire on Americans, and the softer we are the harder they will get it. Gen. Smed speaks as one who has led American Marines in China.

"Osmena says Filipinos want to know where they stand." When granted independence they will soon know that now they were sitting pretty.

Senator Lewis sees Japan formulating a Monroe Doctrine for Asia, under which she will not only dominate, reorganize and arm China, but combine with Russia to take Alaska and the Philippines simultaneously and humble the United States for its exclusion and trade policies. The Hon. James Hamilton knows his Far East from personal inspection, and he opposes disarmament.

China's protests and world pressure have ejected Japan from Chinese territory twice, and it looks as though Tokyo's policy this time is to make protesting by China a capital offense, if it can find the capital.

Japan will be able to wring the cost of the campaign from helpless China, but it is doubtful whether that will equal the loss abroad to her yen and bonds, and certainly she can not buy back her lost prestige with taels.

When that Japanese army arrives undoubtedly a large number of bandits will be discovered in the vicinity of Shanghai, the petty-larceny brand that wholesalers simply can't abide.

And Uncle Sam used to "tell 'em" instead of tagging along with commissions, to which he does not belong, as an "observer." PAUL HUDSON.

JUST FOLKS
By EDGAR A. GUEST

BACK TO PLAIN LIVING.

The folks who formerly ate lots
Of artichokes and apricots
And alligator pears and things
Designed especially for kings
And queens and multimillionaires,
Are back to home-stewed Bartlett pears.

The folks who bought three-flavored ices
And never haggled over prices;
Who made it an established code
To serve a fruit pie a la mode,
Are happy now if in their reach is
The old-time dish of clingstone peaches.

The folks who thought that after meat
Desserts should be both rich and sweet
And ordered ice cream served in shapes
Of floral wreath and clustered grapes
Are back to where our Mas began us—
The good old dish of sliced bananas.

Behold the table! Once again
'Tis set with wholesome food and plain.
Once more—no matter how it hurts—
We're getting all our just desserts.
Now back as dinner's closing course

Nobody Tries to Own the Sea Because It Provides Fish Enough for All.

By ROBERT QUILLEN

ASSUME that a peaceful revolution, achieved by reason alone, has established a new civilization in which there is no money.

Men work as usual. The mechanic in a factory, the bricklayer, the dentist, the clerk, the musician, the scientist—each does the thing he is qualified to do.

On their way home when the day's work is finished, men stop at community stores to get the things they need—a dozen eggs, a suit of clothes, a tire, a phonograph, a book.

Every able adult serves the community in some capacity; but the work-day is short, for machines do most of the labor and there is no wasteful overproduction.

Those who refuse to serve are lodged in jail as public enemies and fed on bread and water until they are converted.

There is abundance of everything for everybody. Nobody burdens himself with more than he can use, for he knows he can obtain anything he desires tomorrow. Nobody makes a show of possessions, for he knows that his neighbors can possess as much if they wish.

Pride of ownership is gone, along with greed and envy. Crimes against property are no more. None is rich; none is poor. There is no competition, but only sane cooperation in a regulated production that provides enough for all.

Our present system has been outgrown.

Man's greed for property was developed by hard necessity. When all labor was done by hand, the world was so poor that only the few could have enough.

The strong took what they could and the weak died in want and misery. Fear of want taught men to accumulate. And because the superior alone could obtain abundance, property became a proof of superiority.

The desire to prove himself superior and win the respect of his fellows made man a hoarder of things he didn't need—a money-getter, a lover of property, a show-off.

Want and fear of want built our present system.

Now there is abundance. Machines can make wealth for all. Ten men need no longer starve in order that one may feast.

Greed lives on as a race habit, but men are learning compassion and justice.

The day is coming when it will seem an imbecility to desire more than one needs—when no man will burden himself with possessions.

Holiday From Politics.

Louisville Courier-Journal.

So much has always been said about the chaining of Congress to the chariot wheels of politics, and the unwillingness of our National legislators to forget even for one moment their labels of Republican or Democrat, that the present situation on Capitol Hill calls for attention. Too often in the past the individuals who make up the Senate and House have voted merely as members of one or the other political party, it is true. But in the present state of affairs, a spirit of cooperation exists within the walls of the Capitol which does credit to the elected representatives of the people. On the all-important subject of national relief, at least, the Democratic side has joined with the Republican side in enacting legislation with unusual celerity. The speed with which the Reconstruction Finance Corporation has been set up shows the results that are possible when political differences are relegated to the background.

Only on the theory that they are shutting their eyes to every other consideration except an arbitrary saving of cash can a subcommittee of the committee on appropriations of the House justify its action in drastically cutting the number of officers and men in the Regular Army and the National Guard and eliminating the summer training camps. This foreshadows wreckage of even what structure of national defense still remains. It never has been the policy of the United States to maintain a large standing Army, but we learned in 1917-18 what it may cost in lives and blood to lack in trained manpower, and the sentiment of the country has warmly supported the system of military training camps which assures us of a continuing supply of men of military training, who can do their bit almost on the instant in case of emergency.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Congress checked the grab the District Bicentennial Commission tried to slip through. The blanket assumption of control over that vague thing called "concessions" was overwhelmingly voted down. We are told now they are going back to try it again.

Don't let them jam through something that will be a rank injustice to people of the District. Let us know exactly what is under discussion. This thing "concessions" literally involves millions of dollars. It directly or indirectly affects every business man and woman, every property owner in the District. Honestly and openly administered, it can be worth something legitimately profitable to the merchants and workers of the District.

Let us know what is meant by "concessions." Define the thing or the service. And let us know who is to be given the concession, and what is to be paid for the privilege of a concession, and who is to benefit by the income from the tax on these concessions, and who is to determine the granting of the privilege of these concessions. Let us know who will administer the supervision over the concessions.

Give this business careful consideration. Do you know there is a New York concern operating in this city preparing what it calls an official program, for which it claims it has the sanction of the District Bicentennial Commission as a concession?

Do you know there is a New York concern which manufactures floats and decorations which has opened headquarters and claims it has been authorized to operate as an official Bicentennial concession in the District?

Do you know a New York costumer is preparing to act as official concessionaire for his products?

Do you know arrangements are already under way to tax all parking privileges as District Bicentennial concessions?

Who authorized such concessions?

Am I correct in understanding that the District Bicentennial Commission as now constituted is legally incapable of operating for profit and gain; nor can it accept gifts or conduct any commercial business of any kind?

Think about this "concession" business. HARRY JOHNSON.

Working Girl Urges Women to Cut Out Alcohol and Set the Country's House in Order.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It seems to me that with the world in its present travail all women have bigger work to do than campaigning for the repeal of the eighteenth amendment.

Let us forget how much liquor has been drunk since the war. Let us forget liquor. Millions of us of the original younger generation quit drinking months before the market crash. Why? Because we have seen alcohol first fog and then deteriorate men's brains—and women's brains. Because alcohol is first a stimulant and then a depressant—and the danger comes when it is a depressant.

Let us work together and quit drinking and help to set America's house in order.

Forget the repeal of the eighteenth amendment and look toward the sun where dawns a new era, in which buoyant health and peace of mind, not alcoholic drinks, will make us "feel good" always.

Beware of Alliances, Says Writer—Would Have United States Thoroughly Prepared.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: England's reluctance to join the United States in China merely proves to the satisfaction of this writer that there is and always has been a secret understanding between Britain and Japan on Far Eastern matters.

Under the mellow regime of President Harding the fighting forces of this great country began to dwindle, notwithstanding that our coastline and property rights exceed those of other nations, and hice old grannies have been chopping our Navy ever since.

The only way to carry out genuine disarmament is to sink all the warships in the world at the same time and stop building them. The world is not ready for that step, however, and, for my part, I want to see the United States absolutely independent of all alliances and with the biggest fleet of warships and aircraft in the world.

The time has come to prepare, and do so quickly for a conflict with a nation that is running wild. E. H.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Will you please be so kind as to do me the courtesy to correct a misquotation concerning my statement about women in politics, which you referred to in today's paper carrying an editorial from the Chicago Tribune.

When I said that we are in awkward state, and have not learned how to handle ourselves, and that we are at a loss when the occasion requires poise, self-confidence and quick wits, I was referring only to my own countrywomen, and was trying to emphasize the fact of our recent appearance in political life. I did not mention women of any other country.

My admiration for the American women could never allow me to express myself in such terms concerning them, as I well know their marvelous achievements in this field.

CHAMBERLAIN URGES DEBTS CANCELLATION

British Chancellor Also Favors Abandoning of German Reparations.

London, Feb. 2 (A.P.).—Cancellation of German reparations and interallied war debts was advocated by Chancellor of the Exchequer Neville Chamberlain when Parliament reassembled today as the most effective means of settling the world's financial problems.

"The policy of his majesty's government," he said in answer to a question, "is that a comprehensive and permanent settlement of reparations must be reached as soon as possible. We believe, as successive governments in this country have believed in the past, that this aim can best be realized by means of a general cancellation of reparations and war debts."

Silent on U. S. Payments.

When a Conservative member asked him: "Can we have any assurance that payments are not to be made to America unless we get payments from other countries?" he made no reply.

The chancellor's declaration was made in answer to a question put by Frederick Seymour-Cocks, Laborite M. P., who asked him whether he could "make a statement as to the results of the meeting at Basel of the advisory committee under the Young plan and upon the present position of the question of reparations and war debts."

Mr. Chamberlain replied that a permanent settlement was not in view at the present time, but that negotiations were continuing with the French government and other powers concerned as to a new date for the postponed reparations parley at Lausanne.

Admits Germany Obligated.

Admitting that Germany was obligated to continue payments under the provisions of the Young plan, he said: "It is clear from the report of the Basel committee that Germany is not in a position to resume fulfillment of those conditions. It is obvious that when the creditor countries come to consider these obligations that fact must be taken into account.

"An interchange of views on the subject has taken place with the French government and as it has not yet been found possible to secure a full agreement in advance from the governments chiefly concerned, it may prove the best course to reserve the whole question for settlement by the conference when it meets."

outstanding. In addition, the Federal Reserve system holds abundant amounts of gold bars which can be converted into gold coin on short notice.

The American banks are the only ones in the world outside of South Africa which freely furnish gold coin. Even in France, where the gold standard is strongly entrenched, the banks decine to issue gold in small amounts. The French banks will, however, issue gold bars on demand, but these bars, weighing 26 pounds and costihg several thousand dollars, are too costly and too unwieldly to support the newly created business of profiteering in gold currency.

As a result, it was explained today, the foreign vendors of coins had turned to the United States as their sole source of supply.

(Associated Press.)

Howard Hughes, wealthy motion picture producer, has told the Navy he is interested in buying the dirigible Los Angeles to be used in making a new movie thriller.

No purchase price has been mentioned, but Rear Admiral W. A. Moffett, chief of the Bureau of Aeronautics, thinks $500,000 would not be too much to ask. Money obtained from its sale would be used in enlarging the ZRS-5, new giant airship now under construction at Akron.

Admiral Moffett said Hughes would be invited to come to Washington to discuss the proposition. If Navy officials approve, Congress first must act, and it is likely that the law will require the Navy to ask for bids.

The Navy's idea is to increase the size of the ZRS-5 by about 1,000,000 cubic feet.

GANDHI'S SON TAKEN; CENSURE VOTE FAILS

British Government Strikes Two Heavy Blows at India Rebels.

Bombay, Feb. 2 (A.P.).—The government struck two swift blows at Mahatma Gandhi's new civil disobedience campaign today through the arrest of the leader's youngest son and a legislative victory.

Devi Das Gandhi, handsome, earnest believer in his father's doctrine, was arrested at a New Delhi railway station while en route to the frontier. A warrant for the arrest of the young man had been out for some time.

Devi Das' arrest marks the fourth detention in the mahatma's household since his return to India from the London round-table conference. Mrs. Gandhi and their oldest son followed the mahatma to prison.

The government defeated by a vote of 62 to 44 a resolution of censure in the Legislative Assembly in New Delhi today. The measure would have condemned the mahatma's internment and the arrest of Sen Gupta, another Indian Nationalist, besides expressing disapproval of the treatment of women in the campaign against civil disobedience.

Meanwhile, at Poona Jail, the wizened old crusader for independence kept in touch with the outside world by correspondence with friends. He spent much of his time today writing discourses on Hindu scriptures and answering letters. Many of his correspondents are Americans, to whom he quaintly replies in his own crippled script. He discusses with them morals, health, religion and offers advice to women in distress, but eschews politics.

Figures on casualties since the mahatma's recent disobedience orders became known today for Bombay. Two persons have been killed and 20 wounded by bullets, and 360 injured by lathis. Police have arrested 647 persons, among whom were 65 women.

The Beltsville 4-H Glee Club will also sing during the intermission.

GOOD GRACE SOUGHT ON TAX LEGISLATION

Snell Asks Nation to Prove Sportsmanship as New Levies Are Made.

By J. B. McDONNELL.

A plea to individuals and organized groups to cease demanding extraordinary expenditures of Congress and to take the forthcoming dose of increased taxes in the spirit of good sportsmanship was voiced yesterday by Representative Bertrand H. Snell, (Republican), of New York, leader of his party in the House.

Congress is not playing politics in the framing of the new tax law and realizes it will hand the people an unpalatable dose in the higher tax pill, but is constrained to recognize that extraordinary measures are necessary to meet the emergency conditions of the Federal Treasury, Mr. Snell said.

Government expenditures must be cut down if there is to be any hope of balancing the Federal budget—a matter of primary concern to every citizen because of the directly adverse effect on each individual of a sorely unbalanced budget—the Republican House leader said.

Predictions Mere Guesses.

"No man can say just what taxes will be decided on," he said. "Many predictions have been made. None can be more than a guess at the future. We have got to raise additional millions of dollars in order to protect the credit of the Nation. We are going to do that.

"We are trying to find taxes which will be as unobjectionable as possible. We know that no tax is unobjectionable and we don't expect to succeed very well in pleasing everybody in the kind of a tax measure which finally is enacted. I think that individuals and business should be pleased with the decision that there shall be no retroactive provision in the new tax law affecting income tax payments for last year."

Occupying the position of minority leader, Representative Snell's effective part in carrying the work of the House forward smoothly has been generally overlooked because of the prominence of Speaker John N. Garner. Czar Garner has been, and is, eye-filling in his role of Speaker, but if Mr. Garner has been a czar as Speaker he has had the aid of Mr. Snell as a sort of second.

Have Conferred on Problems.

The lessons Speaker Garner learned from his close friendship and association with Speaker Nicholas Longworth have taught him to consult with the leader of the minority party and there probably is not a single important question which has come up in the course of this Congress which has not been frankly discussed behind closed doors between the frank Speaker and the equally frank Republican leader.

Indicative of the effectiveness with which leaders are working is the way in which the House has set at naught the predictions of the expert predictors. It was said the current session would be a sort of Kilkenny cats affair. It has been anything but that. Despite the czarism, however, it is likely that the House seldom has been as free as it is today and seldom before has the most unimportant member been able to get more kindly hearing of his individual ideas from the leaders of his party.

Representative Snell violated the accepted rules of partisan politics in discussing the general situation for publication. He praised the Democrats in the House. He said that he thought they were trying honestly and conscientiously to meet the needs of the Nation. He hadn't seen, so far, any glaring evidence that the Democrats in the House were trying to play cheap partisan politics with the needs of the emergency.

Both Must Share Blame.

He might well afford to say that. For the first time in many tax-revision moons the majority party has called in the minority party and said we shall frame a new tax law together. But the Democrats are not to be clothed with angelic robes because of that. The tax knife cuts two ways.

No matter what measures they frame it will mean increased taxes and the imposition of annoying and irritating taxes. If the Republicans are hand-in-hand in the framing of the new law then they must share whatever unpopularity results from it.

Paper Says Smith To File Intentions

New York, Feb. 2 (A.P.).—The World-Telegram says the possibility of Alfred E. Smith seeking the presidential nomination at the Democratic national convention in June appeared greater today when it was learned Mr. Smith had prepared a statement of his intentions.

The date of release of the statement will be decided, the paper says, at a conference of leaders opposed to Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt, an avowed candidate.

It was said to be unlikely that anything would be made public prior to the return from Florida of John J. Raskob, chairman of the Democratic national committee.

At Mr. Smith's office it was said he did not care to comment on the story. There was speculation as to whether the reported announcement would be made public before the New Hampshire primary early in March, at which supporters of both Smith and Roosevelt will be candidates for membership in the State's delegation to the national convention.

were maintaining their opposition to the direct relief bill. A poll of the Republicans by Administration supporters showed 28 against the bill and 14 in favor of it.

Testimony that unemployment relief funds in elven large Eastern and Middle Western cities will not last another six months was given a House labor subcommittee yesterday by Miss Helen Hall, of the National Federation of Settlements.

Urging Federal relief in the form of the La Follette-Costigan bill, Miss Hall presented the results of a personal survey in Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, Detroit, Toledo, Columbus, Cleveland, Akron, Buffalo, Syracuse, St. Louis and Madison, Wis.

"In only one city did I receive a report that the unemployment relief funds would last as long as June 1," she testified. "In most cities exhaustion was anticipated in from one to two months."

Miss M. T. Amadell, representing New York City professional men and women, testified 40,000 industrial women employes and 10,000 stenographers and clerks are out of work there.

Labor Council in Session.

The executive council of the American Federation of Labor yesterday began its midwinter meeting in a session devoted to a survey of all phases of the unemployment situation.

A report on recent negotiations which ended in a 10 per cent wage reduction for railroad workers will be received, the statement said, and "the wage-reducing policy now being pursued by large employers of labor throughout the Nation will be given special attention."

First in the Hearts of His Countrymen

COLONIAL COIFFURE TO BE SEEN IN 1932.

The pompadour and loose curls which formed the feminine coiffure in George Washington's day is expected to play a prominent part in the hair dress for this fall and winter.

The Colonial motif for this part of milady's toilet, revived by Emile Beauvais, of Washington, D. C., president of the National Hairdressers and Cosmetologists Association, was inspired by the coming Bicentennial celebration of George Washington's birth.

To create the Colonial effect, the hair is loosely curled, brushed back in a pompadour and caught up in the back. Three stray curls are left over the shoulders, two on one side and one on the other. For formal dinners and similar affairs the hair is dusted with talcum powder, which can easily be brushed out.

A modified Colonial coiffure in a semipompadour will be used on less formal occasions. Various decorations of white or colored beads or black satin or velvet ribbon may be used according to the taste of the individual.

MOROCCAN MOUNTAIN NAMED FOR WASHINGTON.

Near Tangier, Morocco, is a rising eminence which once proudly bore the name of "Mount Washington," now known simply as "The Mountain." It was named for George Washington while the first President still lived.

This has been brought to light by the discovery of a letter dated March 8, 1800, to the Secretary of State from James Simpson, then American Consul at Tangier. The letter was written from "Mount Washington, near Tangier," where the consul had removed with his family to escape the plague which it was feared would break out in the city at any time. It notes, with regret the receipt of news of Gen. Washington's death. "His public and private virtues," wrote Mr. Simpson, "must immortalize his name."

WASHINGTON'S DIGNITY IMPRESSED CONGRESS.

Washington's dignified conduct, when he appeared before the Continental Congress to accept the commission as commander in chief of the Army, made a deep impression upon the members of that body.

A few days before Washington received his commission, John Adams, writing to Elbridge Gerry, of Massachusetts, had the following to say:

"There is something charming to me in the conduct of Washington. A gentleman of one of the first fortunes upon the continent, leaving his delicious retirement, his family and friends, sacrificing his ease, and hazarding all in the cause of his country! His views are noble and disinterested. He declared, when he accepted the mighty trust, that he would lay before us an exact account of his expenses, and not accept a shilling for pay."

Low in Funds, Virginia Schools to Close Early

Richmond, Va., Feb. 2 (A.P.).—Dr. Sidney B. Hall, State superintendent of public instruction, today informed the governor that owing to lack of funds hundreds of public schools in Virginia will have to close this session much earlier than usual.

The statement is based on a report made to the department of education by the various division superintendents. It shows that even in many of the counties which will run their schools for a full term, they will only be able to do so by borrowing money or making drastic cuts in the salaries of teachers.

MRS. JUDD BATTERS STATE PSYCHIATRIST

Also Kicks Sheriff at Trial, Promising Her Husband Will Shoot Him.

Phoenix, Ariz., Feb. 2 (A.P.).—Winnie Ruth Judd, accused "trunk murderess," late today attacked a psychiatrist witness at her trial, aimed a kick at her sheriff custodian, and promised "my husband will shoot you in the morning."

The surprising action by the young woman, who is on trial for the murder of Agnes Leroi, her friend, occurred in a hallway of the courthouse, following adjournment of the court for the day. Mrs. Judd also is charged with the murder of Hedvig Samuelson, another friend.

Dr. Paul E. Bowers, stocky, outspoken Los Angeles psychiatrist, apparently had aroused Mrs. Judd's anger by contradicting the insanity claim by which her counsel hopes to save her from the gallows.

Dr. Bowers had testified the young defendant was sane. She knocked him bouncing against a corridor wall, kicked at Sheriff J. R. McFadden and promised "my husband will shoot you."

Seethes With Wrath.

She was whisked to her cell seething with wrath, while the astounded psychiatrist rubbed a bruise on his chest.

Dr. Bowers, called in rebuttal by the State, testified he found no evidence of the dementia praecox to which preceding defense alienists had ascribed her erratic actions, past and present. He succinctly set down as sham her "voices on the roof," persecution delusions, and indifference.

Reading verbatim from a manuscript he said represented conversations he had with her, he quoted the 27-year-old, bobbed-haired defendant as detailing recent love affairs.

The sharp-faced "slim, undernourished young woman," who his diagnosis described, displayed lively signs of resentment of his apparently unexpected description of her jail-cell moods, attitudes and disclosures.

Dr. Clifford Wright and Dr. Edward Huntington Williams, members of the Los Angeles County Lunacy Commission, concurred in testimony Mrs. Judd is insane and was insane on the day of the death of her two friends, whose mutilated bodies were shipped in trunks to Los Angeles.

No Feeling About Deaths.

"She told me she had no feeling whatever about the death of those two girls—that she had no feeling about her connection with it," testified Dr. Wright.

He testified to belief mental disorders had become apparent early in the defendant's life.

In her childhood days, he said, when she attended church services—her father is a retired minister of the Free Methodist Church—she "began to wonder about the religious songs as applied to herself."

A shock which may have caused definite glandular disorganization, and resultant deterioration or progressive "childishness," Dr. Wright said, was received by Mrs. Judd at 17 years of age, when she believed she was to become a mother.

Her Life Is Traced.

He traced her life to 18 years of age and "marriage with a man 22 years older than herself."

"They went to Mexico," he related. "She had numerous pets—cats, dogs, canaries. They began to disappear—she thought her husband did away with them out of jealousy.

"She suffered an illusion—her husband has testified no child was born—that she was a mother. She named her mythical baby 'John Robert Judd.'

Ishmael Burton Given Promotion

Ishmael Burton, assistant chief examiner of the Federal Trade Commission since 1928, has been appointed to succeed the late Herbert L. Anderson as chief examiner, it was announced yesterday.

Teachers also have been affected, nearly one-third of them receiving only part pay.

PREPARATIONS MADE FOR MASQUE FEB. 21

A corps of experts in their lines are preparing for the first presentation of the "Masque of Wakefield," February 21, at Constitution Hall under joint auspices of United States and District George Washington Bicentennial Commissions.

Sponsors of the masque said yesterday overflow audiences are expected at each performance from the early demand for box and reserved seat tickets. The performance will be repeated February 25, with delegates to the National Education Association as special guests, and a second public performance, February 26.

Percy Jewett Burrell, of Boston, director of pageants of the United States Bicentennial Commission, is an organizer and director of national reputation. U. S. SALARY RAISES FORBIDDEN BY HOUSE

Civil Service Commission, for it won't have anything to do," he said.

During the fight on the measure it was brought out that the rule was designed particularly to apply to the Postoffice, War and Navy Departments, where length of service rather than reclassification, qualified for promotion and salary increases.

Representative Byrns made clear that the limitation would apply to Army and Navy personnel, as well as postal employes. He pointed out that in cases of "absolute necessity," the President may fill vacancies by written authorization.

Disposition of Senator Borah's pay cut bills was again at issue in the Senate when the Idaho Senator said he had decided the finance rather than the appropriations committee should have jurisdiction. Senator McNary asked a temporary postponement to give Chairman Dale (Republican), Vermont, of the civil service committee a chance to be heard.

He said Senator Dale had expressed belief that the bills should go to his committee.

One Change in George Bill.

Senator Borah said that when a bill to increase salaries was introduced in 1925 it went first to the finance and then to the appropriations committee. In view of this precedent, he said, the finance committee should consider them.

The finance committee, favorably reporting the George bill for retrenchment in governmental departments, made only one change.

To the stipulation that the President, in recommending abolition of any agency and transfer of its duties to another department, should report his action to Congress, the committee added:

Ground Hog Views Shadow Despite Weather Forecast

Quarryville, Pa., Feb. 2 (A.P.).—Quarryville's famous ground hog saw his shadow at 9:21 today and hiked back into his hole for six weeks more of winter.

No less an authority than George W. Hensel, hibernating governor of slumbering lodge of ground hogs of Quarryville, made the announcement at noon, and Weather Bureau reports that it was too cloudy didn't weaken him one bit.

Hensel was up at dawn, gathering his tribesmen about him for an early start into the countryside, because, he says, you never can tell when the ground hog will venture forth.

Tramping through snow-clad hill and valley, squad No. 1, under Patriarch W. E. Montgomery, came to a spot where the sun shone 7 minutes and that, the patriarch says, is long enough for any alert ground hog to see the ominous gray. The sun itself would have been enough to send him scurrying back to cover, but when Mr. Ground Hog saw the snow, too, he turned around and ran before Montgomery had a chance to tell him that both the snow and cold were something new to the countryside this winter.

When the slumbering lodge men come out of their holes for their annual jamboree and turkey banquet tonight, they are going to devise some way of lobbying a national holiday through Congress in honor of the patron, the ground hog, Hensel says.

(Associated Press.)

Prohibition Director Woodcock announced last night that Walter P. King, at present prohibition administrator for Hawaii, will return to Richmond, Va., to be assistant administrator there.

King will replace Robert D. Ford, who will succeed Malachi S. Harney in St. Paul, as one of a series of shifts in prohibition personnel.

March 4 Fixed as Date For Death of Dry Slayer

Special to The Washington Post.

Warsaw, Va., Feb. 2.—Circuit Judge E. Hugh Smith today fixed March 4 as the date that Randolph Cox must go to the electric chair for the murder of J. N. Wood, prohibition officer. The murder occurred at Warsaw in December, 1930.

The Supreme Court granted the accused a writ of error which was heard, but a new trial was refused.

Editor Abandons Plans For National Paper

New York, Feb. 2 (A.P.).—Stanley High, former editor of the Christian Herald, today announced suspension of the plan to establish here a national morning newspaper. He had been engaged in promoting the project for several months and said "business conditions seem to dictate our present action."

Mr. High asserted, however, the paper had received pledges for "more than one-half of the necessary total of $5,500,000" with which it had hoped to start publication and had an advance subscription list of "nearly 60,000."

He indicated an effort would be made later to start publication.

Beckley, W. Va., Feb. 2 (A.P.).—Four persons were killed today when a can of liquid found in the yard of their home at Stanaford, near here, exploded as a member of the family tried to force it open with a kitchen knife.

One other occupant of the house was injured seriously. The sixth escaped injury. The house was wrecked.

The dead were Wilmer Bailey; his brother, Ash Bailey; Emory Thurman, and his wife, Vivian Thurman. Miss Peachie Parker was taken to a Beckley hospital. Physicians said she had only a slight chance to recover.

Dahlgren Chosen For Plane Tests

Dahlgren, Va., on the Potomac below Quantico, present site of the Navy proving grounds for large guns, has been selected for diving tests for Navy planes, according to an announcement made yesterday.

The Navy has made the move to the inaccessible Virginia field in the interests of keeping secret descriptive information on their experimental fighting ships.

At least three fatal crashes have resulted from diving tests at the Naval Air Station, the most recent coming on November 6 of last year when Edward T. C. Ritchie died as a diving bomber he was testing went to pieces in the air, rendering him unconscious before he could clear himself from the broken plane.

Appomattox Memorial Contest Is Announced

(Associated Press.)

The War Department yesterday announced a Nation-wide contest open to all architects for a design for the Appomattox Court House Memorial Monument in Virginia.

The competition, being conducted under direction of the quartermaster general of the Army, will close March 2, after which a jury of outstanding architects and sculptors will decide the winner.

Virginia donated the site for the monument, which will commemorate the ending of the Civil War, and Congress authorized $100,000 for it.

"Choosey" People like the way they TASTE..

IT'S just what you'd expect. People who enjoy the good things of life... are constantly looking for something better to eat and drink... and smoke. Something that's out of the ordinary.

In cigarettes this better taste can come only from finer ingredients. Chesterfields are more satisfying to the cultivated palate... because there's never any attempt to skimp on Turkish leaf.

These more expensive... more richly flavored Turkish tobaccos are added with a generous hand... and 'choosey' people... everywhere... like the result.

In fact Chesterfield's new way of mingling tobacco flavors and aromas is really equivalent to creating an entirely new kind of tobacco... one that combines the best qualities of Turkish and fine Domestic leaf.

Perhaps you've noticed that the paper in Chesterfields is whiter... purer. Thousands of dollars were spent on research to perfect this paper. It burns without any taste or odor of its own. A detail, of course. But it adds immeasurably to your enjoyment.

Smoke Chesterfields whenever you like... They're mild and pure. They'll never tire you as an over-sweetened cigarette might easily do. Day in... day out... Chesterfields taste right. Light up and see for yourself. They satisfy!

Culbertson on Contract

by Ely Culbertson

World's Champion Player and Greatest Card Analyst

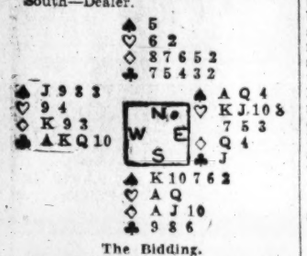
DISCARDING WINNERS TO WIN.

SOMETIMES spectacular play is an essential element of success, although more frequently it is a gesture without particular significance. In the hand below, played by Mr. Garnett L. Merriman, of Lynchburg, Va., his spectacular play furnished the only key to the making of the contract.

Both sides vulnerable.

South—Dealer.



The Bidding.

(Figures after bids in table refer to numbered explanatory paragraphs.)

South	West	North	East
1♠	2♣(1)	Pass	3♡(2)
Pass	3NT(3)	Pass	4♡
Pass	Pass	Pass

1—The strong honor holding possibly justifies the Overcall, although the suit is only four cards in length.

2—East's Jump Overcall indicates a strong and freakish hand.

3—West's hand contains a stopper in spades and a little support for the hearts. However, it gives promise of game in no-trump in view of the strong bidding by partner.

In play, South led the diamond Ace and North played the deuce. The leader then studied the situation carefully. He was sure of 2 trump tricks with his major ten-ace holding in trumps. It was only necessary to secure 1 more trick to defeat the contract. North had refused to raise his bid. It was possible that he held a Singleton in spades. In any event, a spade lead seemed to offer the only hope of defeat for the contract. To this lead a low card was played from Dummy, North played the five spot and East won with the Queen. He realized that North held a singleton spade and so Mr. Merriman now led the Knave of clubs, overtaking in the Dummy and continuing two more rounds of that suit, upon which he discarded the Ace and four of spades. Danger of a ruff in spades now being averted, the trumps were led and 2 trump tricks conceded to South and the contract made.

Less accurate play must have resulted in defeat.

TODAY'S POINTER.

Question: If Assisting Hand denies trump suit bid by Declarer, how does Declarer revalue his hand?

Answer: He revalues his hand the same as the Assisting Hand if he has trump support for his partner; if he is going to rebid his own suit he simply revalues his trump suit, counting the long trump tricks the same as he would were they in a side suit.

QUESTIONS ANSWERED.

Mr. Culbertson will be glad to answer questions on bidding and play of hands sent in by readers. Address him in care of The Washington Post, inclosing a two-cent stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Dare Interprets the Mode

This and that in the new mode for Miladi Elegante! (Selected by Dare.)

New York, Feb. 2.—Hail the first news of the spring and summer collections of the Paris Haute Couture!

Who says there is nothing new under the mode sun! There is so much that is new that one is guilty of a moment's panic—reviewing one's last spring wardrobe and mentally adding up for the millionth time one's running expenses—no, not the ones you run away from, but those you can't!

But take heart, because for once in her frivolous, heartless and capricious life Dame Fashion has decided to be merciful, and the new in the mode is confined mostly to accessories and trimming details, rather than to actual silhouette changes.

Of course, fabrics are new and in infinite variety. The enormous popularity of wool in the past year or two has quite naturally stimulated the silk manufacturers to further effort, with the result that the new in silks is not just another new design in prints, but in actual weave. And these new silk weaves, inspired by the vogue for woolens, have dull surfaces and an ideal weight for cutting and draping. The peau d'ange, remember, "angel skin" of last year, was the forerunner of the new dull-surfaced and heavy silks.

Naturally, the new silks are best suited to afternoon and evening dresses, while the wools still hold the field for daytime wear. Wool crepe, wool voile and tweed are the most popular fabrics for sports wear and tailleurs, as well as the coat dresses I mentioned earlier this week. And the new silks, with their usual unintelligible and incomprehensible names, are the choice for semiformal and formal wear. Just learn that if a silk is heavy but very supple and dull surfaced, it is one of the new ones, and don't try to ask for it by name!

So-o-o-o, there will be more of the new in the spring and summer mode another day—watch for it!

One well-made and well-fitting gown, on flattering and becoming and simple lines, and five different and unusual and stylish sleeve sets which sew onto an under guimpe, making six dresses for your wardrobe! Yes, it can be done, and is done, the Dahray way. Sister Dionne has the whole six dresses, and La Chic Secretaire has two of 'em—and sh-h-h-h-h, I have always had 'em!

It only remained for me to make you a leaflet telling you how to make the dress, which I did. And from this leaflet, which you can have for just the sending of a stamped, self-addressed envelope to the Dare Department of The Washington Post, you can make and fit the 2½ yards of unbleached muslin and then cut your good material from that much more easily than you can even from a paper pattern. Then the five sleeve and vestee sets are designed, which you can make or have made. Six dresses instead of one! Better send for the leaflet!

Thought you might like to see some little novelties that I gathered together for you today—something in the new gloves, with the contrasting colored bow incrusted right into the glove; another with tucks and false button effects on the cuff, and another just stitched for trimming. And a chic jacket in white peau d'ange, that whitest of white materials. And a leather belt for the lady who must have her smokes, with everything that she would have to have all concealed in the buckle!

* * * *

Au revoir.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

EPIDEMICS AMONG THE WILD.

THE prevalence of epidemics is not because civilized man lives under artificial conditions. There are people who say it is, sometimes going as far as to argue that epidemics are visitations of Providence as punishment meted out to man for having built up an artificial society; that they are a curse on those who show their disrespect and irreligio oy obedience to the laws of social behavior; more frequently they are alleged to be misfortunes earned by ignorance or wrong living.

In proof that epidemics are products of our civilization it is said that primitive peoples escape. Better knowledge of these peoples shows us that they are not free from epidemics. Some say wild animals escape, and that this is proof disasters are products of civilization. There is abundant evidence that epidemics prevail at times among wild animals. I think it was Salon who wrote of epidemics among wild buffalo in Africa that almost emptied certain localities of game.

Dr. Charles Elton writes of an epidemic among hippopotami in the Kongo in 1911. There have been several very virulent epidemics among snowshoe rabbits in Manitoba. Elton recorded one that prevailed in 1887. He says that such epidemics prevail at intervals of about ten years. Dr. F. P. Thompson has told me of one that he had knowledge of less than twenty years ago. Elton refers to extensive epidemics among hares in northern Norway, and among field mice and rats in various parts of Europe.

The tendency of plague to spread among rats, ground squirrels and such wild animals is well known. The great rat and mouse migrations found on the records are generally explained on the theory of flight from animal epidemics. The classical epidemic of Picardy, which prevailed many years ago in France, was attributed to the migration of field mice into human habitations.

Dr. Clark finds relapsing fever and malaria quite prevalent among wild monkeys and coccidiosis among opossums.

There is ample evidence that man would meet with disappointment if, to avoid his epidemic diseases, he returned to life in caves and trees.

What Today Means to You

"AQUARIUS."

IF February 3 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 10 a. m. to 11:40 a. m., from 4 p. m. to 5:10 p. m. and from 7:30 p. m. to 8:45 p. m. The danger periods are from noon to 1:30 p. m. and from 9:10 p. m. to 10:30 p. m.

A relaxed, let-down atmosphere will prevail February 3, and the mistakes of the day will be made through the lack of prompt decision and through lukewarm enthusiasm. A word to lovers—do not allow the advice of others to have undue weight!

The child born on this February 3 will show pronounced symptoms at an early age of the "know-it-all" disease, and will express this malady through an arrogant manner, disrespect and unbearable conceit. Experience will tap its head swelling, and it will grow into a delightful and useful adult. It will have pronounced ability and special talents.

Born February 3, that which is lacking in your general "make-up" is more than offset by your abundance of common sense. Your pluck is often worth more to you than science, and your intuitiveness more than a more brilliant brain. Nothing can damp your spirits, and almost nothing can disturb your imperturbable good temper. The testiest and most acidulated of people melt beneath the abandon of your manner. Your affability and good cheer is genuine, and is born from the sunshine within. You are not afraid to be outspoken, and can be very much on your dignity.

No pronounced talents are indicated, but you are too willing a worker and have too clever hands not to make good, if given half a chance. You know how to use your head to save your feet through your method and system. You are very patient as an instructor, and are able to explain yourself in an intelligent, a simple and an understanding manner. Others find you a most agreeable co-worker as you have an equal amount of both energy and tact. You can lead others without appearing to be bossing them. Your personality is stronger than you realize, and your influence is far reaching. You are a sincere lover of home and home ties.

Successful people born February 3: Horace Greeley, journalist.
Spencer F. Baird, naturalist.
Ogden N. Rood, "the father of experimental physics in United States."

Indoor—Outdoor Gardens

FUCHSIAS.

THE annual flower shows are no doubt responsible for the revival of interest in fuchsias. For a long time, more than 25 years, we rarely saw any of these little plants, which one writer delightfully describes as "fairy trees with lighted lanterns." Now they have once more "come into their own" and we see them everywhere.

Fuchsias are of easy cultivation, but they require a little different treatment from geraniums and other plants of that class. In the first place they like a soil composed mostly of leafmold. Of course, it must have sufficient sand so that the water will have a free passage, for they will not tolerate wet feet.

They demand a great deal of water, both at the roots and overhead. If the drainage is perfect you can hardly give them too much. It is well, in a warm room, to make it a practice to water them every day. If you allow these plants to get really dry at the roots they will be quite likely to drop their leaves and buds. This will mean a check from which the plants may not recover during the entire season.

All fuchsias require frequent repotting during the early stage of their growth. If you allow your plants to become pot-bound while young they are sure to be greatly injured. So, as soon as you see the roots are filling the old pots, shift to new ones. A large specimen requires a large-sized pot, usually a 10-inch size is not too large.

Fuchsias do best in eastern windows, though they will grow in southern ones. The sunshine during the early morning hours suits these plants much better than that of midday. In windows facing the west you will find that the leaves are apt to curl.

There are many varieties of fuchsias in general cultivation, all good. Some are single and some double. The single sorts are usually more graceful than the double-flowered varieties.

They demand an even temperature. Drafts and sudden drops in temperature are to be avoided. They do well in a temperature of 68 degrees.

Wives of Tomorrow

By FRANCES M'DONALD

THE FEMALE BREADWINNER!

"CAN a woman ever really love a man who allows her to support him?"

The question is not ours, friends. It is just one of our up-and-coming readers starting the new year right. And what to tell her. Being one of those hopelessly feminine souls who could simply not possibly offer a man money, or even pay our own lunch check, how can we wrestle with the problem of actually supporting a man? We know that it is done. We have met women who did it. But then we have met women who were wizards at shooting crap! Life is like that. But let us to the reader and her letter. Does she love this man? Is he even a man? Will some man give her the advice we feel hardly qualified to offer?

Dear Frances McDonald: I am 30 years old, graduate of one of the best of our colleges for women, come of excellent family of rather straitlaced ideas, hold a rather unique position, have a wide circle of friends, but I am unhappy because I have never known a man's love. At school I was rather absorbed in my work and not overpopular. I had no brothers to introduce me around. So my life has been devoid of the thing every woman craves. And I have felt the fact keenly. It has actually embittered me, spoiled all the rewards of success. And now has come the opportunity of filling the gap, of rounding out my life—if I can accept what at present causes me to recoil. The man is younger than I am. Three years younger. He makes no pretense of being able to support himself. Has borrowed of me continually. But has also made love to me—and made me feel like a woman instead of a ghost in a world of living women. He is handsome in a rather frail way, is of a great deal, is an only child, and an orphan. He has no one to love, and seems to love me. But always tells me that his love can mean nothing. Should love ever mean nothing? Should I allow it to mean nothing when it could mean life itself to me? No other man will ever love me. That I know. No other has ever given me a glance, much less a kiss. This one has given glances and kisses. And I have given him some $700 in two years. Money for rent, for doctor, for clothes. He is a singer, but has few engagements. In truth, he is not exceptional, a fair church voice, nothing more. He was still studying when his father died and his allowance ceased. That was given years ago. He has barely eked out an existence since. And has had two severe illnesses.

This is my question: Can a woman ever really love a man who permits her to support him? I at present do not even believe that I love him. But I feel he is essential to my life. We go places, and people do not know that I have paid for the tickets and for the clothes he wears so well. They see us as a couple interested in each other, normal, happy. I crave all that. It will kill something in me to have to go back to my old existence. That is what I mean when I say he is essential to my life. He is not embarrassed by my paying our way. He would not object to my supporting him, and I know would marry me if I were willing to assume the financial side. I am well able to do this, as I was left property besides my work, which also is secure from reverses. The one question is would I learn to despise him? Or would I continue to regard him indulgently as I now do? Or might I even learn to love him, as wives often have? If he were fitted to work and would not, that would be different. But to me he is as unfitted to make his way as a baby would be. Yet he can make me feel gay and at peace with the world, and a part of the world, a person, a woman. Should I marry and support him?

QUANDARY.

And there you have it. Should she? Would he continue to make her feel "gay and at peace with the world?" If so, surely that were worth the price! But would that be the case? We would say keep him on the present basis, feel "indulgent"—but still free! And trust that life might send another. But then we are prejudiced. What should she do?

ROSE ALLEN'S STORY REBUKED BY JUDGE

Jury Completed as Court Raps Words of Love for Brother's Victim.

Norristown, Pa., Feb. 2 (A.P.).—Rose Allen's open confession of continued love for her slain fiance, Francis A. Donaldson 3d, was rebuked today by the court as attorneys completed the jury which is trying her brother, Edward, for murder.

"I love 'Skinny' as much today as I ever did," she had said in a statement yesterday.

But Judge Harold G. Knight, presiding at the trial, frowned upon such utterances off the witness stand and in the presence of prospective jurors.

"We consider the giving and publication of interviews by witnesses while the case is on trial as highly improper," said the judge gravely, "and we wish to express our disapproval. I trust the incident will not be repeated while this case is on trial."

The jury, after a day and a half of effort upon the part of the Commonwealth and defense attorneys, was completed at the afternoon session and is composed of ten men and two women.

First Degree Verdict Asked.

In opening the prosecution, the Commonwealth told the jury it would submit evidence to show that Donaldson was wilfully murdered and that the evidence would justify a verdict of murder in the first degree. David E. Groshens, the assistant district attorney, did not specifically ask for death, but said it would be for the jury to decide the penalty.

Groshens told the jury that Donaldson and Rose Allen were engaged to be married and that the Allen family opposed the match. He related that Rose was told to get out if she did not like the attitude of brother and father and of her going to a Philadelphia hotel and summoning Donaldson and Albert Lucas, his friend.

Groshens described Donaldson's peace visit to the Allen apartment, the quarrel, the vile names hurled at Donaldson, the blow struck by Allen and Donaldson's crashing blow that struck Allen in the mouth.

Fatal Shooting Described.

The defendant clasped his hands tighter as Groshens told the jury that instead of getting a policeman, Allen went 6 miles to a friend's home, obtained his own new shotgun and returned to the apartment. He told of Allen putting the gun together in a back room of the apartment and of meeting Donaldson and Lucas in the foyer as they were leaving.

The assistant district attorney told the jury that he had the gun in a carry position but as Donaldson appeared he raised it to his hip and deliberately fired. He also told of Allen's cool manner after the shooting. He said Allen made no effort to render aid to Donaldson, but turned to consideration of certain social obligations.

Horace Allen, the father, a tragic figure in the case, heard the address of the assistant district attorney. William Allen, of Warrenton, Va., a brother of the defendant, was also present.

Identity of Bronx Gunmen Unsolved

Harlem Baby Killing Is Recalled as Theory in Triple Slaying.

New York, Feb. 2 (A.P.).—The identity of three gunmen who turned a Bronx apartment into an execution chamber for two of Vincent Coll's followers and a woman, continued a mystery to police tonight. Three others were wounded by the bullets suddenly turned upon them as they sat about a table playing cards.

A theory that the triple slaying last night was designed to end the life of Vincent Coll, the gangster who won acquittal by a witness' perjured testimony on a charge of slaying Michael Vengali in the "Harlem baby killing" of last summer, was injected into the investigation.

The oft-repeated story that "Dutch" Schultz, Coll's bitter rival for control of the beer traffic in the Bronx, had offered $50,000 to anyone who would put Coll away was retold. Schultz, those who professed to know, made the offer shortly after Coll was released in December from the "baby killing" charge.

M-2 Disaster Officially Held Mystery by British

London, Feb. 2 (A.P.).—An official question mark was written today over the grave of three score British seamen who vanished in the submarine M-2 beneath the choppy waves of the English Channel, January 26. After days and nights of anxious search all the admiralty has to show for its intensive efforts are only a battered sea bag, and seamen's cap and collar.

The disaster to the M-2, which occurred off Portland Bill when she dived in maneuvers and failed to reappear, thus became the most unusual of its kind in the annals of undersea navigation. The most amazing factor in the disappearance is absence of any sign of actual wreckage or air bubbles.

ROOSEVELT STARTS FOR ISLANDS POST

Says That He Will Put Porto Rican Policies in Effect in Philippines.

New York, Feb. 2 (A.P.).—With the good wishes of a large delegation of friends ringing in his ears, Theodore Roosevelt started today on the first leg of his journey to the Philippine Islands to take over the post of governor general.

Tomorrow he and the rest of his party will be welcomed to Chicago by James Simpson, and Mr. Roosevelt will be the luncheon guest of the Chicago Press Club.

Traveling with him are Mrs. Roosevelt, their 19-year-old daughter Grace; May Weldon, of New York, a friend of Miss Roosevelt, who is going to the Philippines for a visit; Col. Carey Crockett, the governor general's military aid, and Margaret Hensy, his secretary.

In the crowd that saw them off at the Grand Central Terminal were Mrs. Alice Roosevelt Longworth, Mr. Roosevelt's sister; Mrs. C. A. Alexander, his mother-in-law; Sergio Osmena, head of the Filipino delegation at Washington; Senator Ruberto Montinola, one of the legislative leaders in the Philippines; Ogden Reid, a personal friend; Clyde Pangborn, round-the-world flier; Bernt Balchen, polar flier, and a color guard of Boy Scouts.

The governor general said that as he had never been to the Philippines he could not discuss his official plans, although he added he had conferred with "authorities" about health problems there and would put into effect some of the policies he followed as Governor General of Porto Rico.

Anti-Hoover Leader Says Senator Can Carry State Primary.

(Associated Press.)

The silent Hiram Johnson, of California, got a call yesterday from the anti-Hoover leader of Ohio, Fred Warner, to go into the Republican presidential campaign. In bed with an attack of influenza, Senator Johnson did not receive Warner nor send out any comment on the statement left for him by the Ohioan.

An early decision by Mr. Johnson is expected. The filing date for the North Dakota primary closes next week—February 13. The last day for filing in Ohio is March 10.

"I left word with Senator Johnson," said Mr. Warner, who is a former State chairman in Ohio, "that with any reasonable effort if the senator wants to come in he can carry the State primary."

Early in the day, Senator Fess, of Ohio, gave out without comment a telegram from Mrs. Wilma Sinclair Levan, national committeewoman for the State, declaring "heartily in favor of President Hoover," and adding she had "nothing to do with any movement to set up opposition to President Hoover in Ohio."

CHEVROLET DEALERS ADVISED ON SLUMP

1,400 at Luncheon Are Told Individuals Need to Work Out Own Problems.

If every business man in America would follow the advice of the old adage, "Paddle your own canoe," this country's economic ills would be remedied, M. E. Coyle, vice president of Chevrolet Motor Co., told 1,400 Chevrolet dealers and salesmen here yesterday.

Mr. Coyle was honor guest at a luncheon for the company's retail organization of the Baltimore and Richmond zones in the Mayflower Hotel. The meeting in Washington was one of 50 similar ones being held by Chevrolet in important cities of the United States.

"As a fundamental step toward solution of the depression, I believe we must whittle problems down to our own size so that we can deal with them," Mr. Coyle said. "It is ridiculous for the average business man to concern himself with world problems. There are few men with the ability to deal intelligently with the present complicated situation of the world.

"But every man can handle his own business. I suggest, therefore, that each individual devote his entire thought and labor to running his own business on a sound basis. This much is certain—if we have enough small sound businesses we will have a sound Nation.

"If I were an automobile dealer, I would be sure that my rental setup was sensible. I would see to it that my nonproductive expense was at a minimum. I would make sure I was in position to handle used cars profitably. I would get my share of parts and service business. I would see to it that my receivables were not freezing my capital.

The Chevrolet convention here was conducted by W. E. Holler, assistant general sales manager, and a crew of sales officials from the Eastern section of the country. W. M. Packer, Eastern region manager; J. L. Murphy, Baltimore zone manager, and L. M. Cary, Richmond zone manager, were hosts to the dealers and salesmen.

Woman Seeks $25,000 For Injuries in Store

George Valanos and Manuel Gerales, copartners of the Deauville delicatessen, 1629 Connecticut avenue northwest, were named defendants in a suit for $25,000 damages filed in the District Supreme Court yesterday by Mrs. Minnie R. Lloyd, of 1722 Nineteenth street northwest.

Attorney Philip F. Biggins claimed that Mrs. Lloyd had entered the delicatessen September 19 last, and slipped and fell on a slippery place in the flooring. The owners of the store were allegedly negligent in allowing water to stand and make the floor slippery, the suit charged. Mrs. Lloyd suffered permanent injuries, the suit said.

About The Showshops

With NELSON B. BELL

IT has been numerously suggested by informed and literate lovers of the theater these past few days that agencies devoting their energies to civic and patriotic projects involving stage folk and eminence should make sure of their facts before scattering broadsides to the press. This is no more than a matter of simple justice to the actors, to the daily press and, perhaps most of all, to the agencies themselves.

This column has received more than a few complaints that every paper in town last Sunday referred to Margaret Anglin, the distinguished actress who is to appear in Percy Mackaye's masque, "Wakefield," this month, as having appeared "in such successes as 'The Great Divide,' in which she was leading woman for Richard Mansfield."

As a matter of fact, the Mansfield star had risen and set before any one had thought of "The Great Divide." His name never was associated with the famous play, to the best of my knowledge and belief, in any capacity whatsoever. Henry Miller, however, did appear with Miss Anglin in the William Vaughan Moody classic of the West.

It is doubtful if the records will divulge that Miss Anglin ever appeared with Mansfield otherwise than as his leading woman in his memorable production of Edmond Rostand's "Cyrano de Bergerac," which Walter Hampden is so soon to revive for a curtailed engagement at the National.

It may be pleaded that editorial care should preclude the occurrence in print of such errors of statement. That is a good deal to expect in the rush of getting out a daily paper. It seems to me, on the contrary, that responsibility for the factual accuracy of such "publicity handouts" rests primarily with the interests that wish to have them published.

Even the announcements of the death of that homely actor, William Hodge, were not above the criticism of the eagle-eyed in the theater. In the lists of plays in which he had appeared, only a few of his lesser vehicles were named and in none of them was mention made of the greatest play he ever had and the only one that ever compiled a metropolitan run that could more nearly be measured in years than in months or weeks.

This was "The Man From Home," written in collaboration by those astute gentlemen of the theater and the book marts, Booth Tarkington and Harry Leon Wilson.

There ought to be a law!

About this "Blessed Event" business at the Belasco, concerning which the local critical fraternity—including your present guesser—went overboard with all of the tackle, the lunch basket and both of the oars on the play's opening, Monday night, it seems to me that, more nearly than anything else, we have here another "Broadway," plus a new "racket" upon which to base the action, and a great deal more humor, but much the same background, speed and punch.

Structurally, the two plays are much alike, the same "commodities of the theater," in slightly different guise, have been employed and the same sort of touch-and-go melodramatic comedy results.

"Blessed Event" ought to panic Broadway—unless there is too much personal prejudice against the original of its central character, and about that I wouldn't know—and on the road it should be no less than a riot, gaining impetus in inverse ratio to its nearness to New York. The farther away from Times Square it gets, the more of the tang of novelty it will possess. Or am I wrong again?

A long distance call from New York at 7:45 Monday night suggested that I contemplate the new Manuel Seff-Forrest Wilson opus with an eye particularly to the work of Linda Carlon, cast as Miss Stevens, secretary to the young columnist, played with such 100 per cent expertness by Roger Pryor, once leading man of Mr. Stephen E. Cochran's National Theater Players.

This I did. And, if you ask me, I think Miss Carlon does a pretty swell piece of work in a role that could so easily be made a burlesque of what was intended.

This is the philosophical observation of Tom Mix, as conveyed to this department by Hubbard Keavy, chief of the West Coast finger-in-the-wind operatives.

That, says Mr. Keavy, is the explanation Tom Mix gives of his return to the movies to star again in "Westerns," the type of picture he made famous and which made him famous and wealthy. For the last three years he has been "doing a trick" with a circus.

"I'm not working because I need the money," says Tom, just turned 52. "I've got more money than I'll ever spend. But a little more won't do any harm, because I've got to leave my two girls well fixed. Especially my baby, Thomasina (nearly 10). She's going to be well taken care of.

"Money doesn't mean much, anyway," he continues. "You can ride in only one car, sleep in one bed and wear only one suit of clothes at a time. Money's given me some pleasure, but it's been the cause of plenty of trouble, too."

Thus speaks the former $90-a-month United States marshal who has taken thousands from the coffers of the films. And other thousands from circus gate receipts. And doubtless his investments have returned more thousands.

Mix gave up pictures four years ago when talkies disrupted things because he believed outdoor movies, the only kind he is suited for, were "washed up." Mix and his co-star, his horse Tony, thought they couldn't romp and perform within the confines of a sound stage.

Now they have changed their minds!

With true Southern hospitality—Mr. Barron is from Atlanta—as many of the guests as could manage it were not only invited, but urged, to remain for dinner. That, I mean to say, is "putting on the show" to the queen's taste. And the king's, too. There were some of both present.

Mr. Barron, as you may have heard, is an ace!

Buying by Installments

By H. G. WELLS

THREE main types of modern distributive organization exist. First of all comes the department store, the concentrated giant store with an immense radius of delivery, to which people go for provisions, &c. Then the chain stores, the syndicated shops for more immediate necessities, the multiple shops everywhere at hand, that now supply tobacco, everyday groceries, milk, meat, and so forth. And, as a special and important type of department store, in Europe, and particularly in Great Britain, we have the machinery of cooperative buying, by cooperative societies, the surviving tangible fruits of Robert Owen's socialist beginnings. In management and organization, this third class tends to resemble the department stores, the difference being that the object of the cooperative administration is ostensibly for service and not for profit. Gains in the cooperative shop are understood to reduce prices or they are returned to the members of the society as a "dividend."

• • • •

AN interesting type of store is the Woolworth type, in which a miscellany of articles is offered at a uniform price. These stores cut prices by eliminating travelers and advertisement and buying lines of goods by the million direct from the manufacturer.

The activities of the man behind the counter do not end with his handing out the goods demanded by the consumer. If he does less weighing and packing and measuring nowadays, he does more selling. Every capable shop assistant is alert, not only to remind you of any need you may have forgotten or surpressed, but also to "introduce" new goods to you that you have never thought of getting before. He is a propagandist of consumption. Through all distributing organizations—least so, perhaps, in cooperative stores—runs this idea of salesmanship. Salesmanship tries not only to make things attractive to you, but also it seeks to make buying easy for you." And in the last few years, in pursuit of the latter end, it has evolved the installment system. This marks a new phase in distribution. Great multitudes of people are now in possession of goods that they partially own. They have paid an "advance;" they pay for two or three years to complete their purchase, and meawhile in case of default, the seller has the power of recovering the goods.

There was considerable criticism of installment selling in its early stages. Young people, it was thought, might sink into debt at the outset of life, sacrifice economic freedom for immediate advantages of comfort and equipment. They would lose the power of discontinuing or changing their employment; lose, in fact, the right to strike. But this line of thought disregarded the fact that at the worst they would have to surrender a partially used and paid-for commodity that otherwise they might never have possessed. It was also held that in a time of depression the supplying companies would cease to receive the bulk of their installments, and that they in their turn would be unable to observe their obligations to the banks that had financed their enterprise.

• • • •

TESTED in America by the very grave slump of 1930, these fears seem to have been exaggerated. In the United States three-quarters of the automobiles sold are sold now on the installment system, and furniture, refrigerators, radio apparatus, pianos, washing machines, important books at a high price, jewelry and such like goods are largely marketed upon the new lines. When it comes to perishable articles, such as boots and fashionable clothing, the security is manifestly not so good; the installments must be spread over a shorter period and, by taking up references and exacting collateral guarantees, the methods of the seller approximate to those of the ordinary private loan monger. About 13 per cent of the retail trade in the United States is installment selling, and its annual total is estimated at £1,200,000,000 (about $4,000,000,000).

• • • •

The social consequences of this new method of distribution are still a matter for speculation. Installment buying seems likely to diminish savings, hoarding and popular investment. Instead of putting money by to get something, people will get something and then pay for it with the money they would otherwise have put by. They buy first instead of buying last or not at all. There is a quickening of the production, distribution and consumption of goods.

Bochert Glass Factory Is Destroyed by Flames

Clarksburg, W. Va., Feb. 2.—Causing a loss of $45,000, the glass plant of the C. A. Bochert Co., at East Weston, was destroyed by fire of unknown origin this morning. The loss is practically covered by insurance. Firemen saved the larger Louis Glass Manufacturing plant, nearby.

The company, organized a few years ago by Weston residents, was engaged in the decorating of fancy glassware made in other Weston plants. It employed 100 workers. Work will be carried on in temporary quarters and the company will rebuild at once.

HEALTH AND CREED LINKED BY SPEAKER

Christian Science Lecturer Appears on Program of First Church.

A lecture on "Christian Science: Its Influence of Health and Character" was delivered last evening in First Church of Christ, Scientist, by Richard J. Davis, C. S., of Chicago. Mr. Davis is a member of the board of lectureship of the Mother Church, the First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston.

He was introduced by Wilbur E. Yocum, first reader of First Church, under the auspices of which this lecture was given. The lecturer said, in part:

"Mrs. Eddy, the discoverer and founder of Christian Science, says in her sermon entitled, 'The People's Idea of God' (page 7): 'Scientific discovery and the inspiration of Truth have taught me that the health and character of man become more or less perfect as his mind-models are more or less spiritual.' In other words, it is to spiritual thinking and true character building that we must look if we are to have true health and happiness.

Character of Man.

"What then is the character of man? Is it physical? Is it a man's corporeal body that reveals his true nature? The dictionary defines character as that which a person really is, the mental and moral qualities belonging to an individual. Character, then, is thought, or thinking, made up wholly of mental qualities, and the true character of man is revealed in his thoughts. 'As a man thinketh, so is he' (Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures, page 166); and the Bible clearly indicates the connection between health and character building, where it says, 'To be carnally minded is death; but to be spiritually minded is life and peace.'

Taking men as a whole, they all appear to be more or less alike, in physical appearance. But without thought, or ideas, they would all be nonentities. When thought is revealed, however, the distinctive individuality or character of each man shines forth.

"The teachings of Christian Science, therefore, render the world an inestimable service in bringing to light the true spiritual and mental nature of man as the image or idea of divine Mind. At once, the emphasis is taken away from physicality and placed where it belongs, in the realm of thought. And it is in the realm of thought that man finds his true likeness to God. We declare, therefore, that man is a spiritual being, reflecting or imaging forth ideas or thoughts that can have their origin only in God, the divine Mind.

Character of Jesus.

"The character of one man, Jesus the Christ, has stood out before men down through the ages as the ideal of what we truly should be. He has been called the great Exemplar, the Way-shower. It was to the life and character of this man that Mary Baker Eddy turned in the search which resulted in the discovery of Christian Science. She studied his character, his thoughts and works, and discerned that his words, if properly and scientifically understood, were, as He himself declared, Spirit and Life to all mankind.

"Jesus was the Way; that is, he showed us the way in which every man's character can be regenerated through spiritual and scientific thinking. But this does not in any sense imply that he walked the way for us, and that there is nothing for us to do. It is only as men adopt His spiritual standard of living and thinking that they approximate the true character of Christ Jesus.

"Obviously, it was not his physical body or personal appearance that made Jesus the Christ; it was what he thought. He thought divinely, and Christian Science declares that it is what we think that naturally registers our true spirituality."

Mattingly Will Decide Freedom for Chaconas

A decision will be handed down Thursday by Judge Joseph C. Mattingly on the plea for a writ of habeas corpus in the case of Gus Chaconas, of Washington, charged with criminal assault on Olga Iglehart, also of Washington.

Judge Mattingly reviewed the evidence against Chaconas yesterday and heard witnesses on both sides. Chaconas is being held without bail for action of the grand jury, and his attorney, J. Wilson Ryon, asked that Judge Mattingly allow his release on bail in applying for the writ.

Reno School Tract Enlarged.

Another tract was added yesterday to the Reno High School site when the District Commissioners authorized the purchase of 5,400 square feet, improved by a two-story six-room modern brick building, from Thomas M. Heaton, for $14,600.

BOSTON SYMPHONY FEATURES BRAHMS

A beautiful Brahms symphony, his noted one in E minor, was the piece de resistance of the concert by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Constitution Hall yesterday afternoon.

The orchestra was conducted by the eminent musician, Dr. Serge Koussevitzky, and it proved to be one of the most delightful presentations of the musical season. The concert was given under the local management of Mrs. Wilson-Greene.

Frieda Hempel, Viennese operatic star, who was the soloist at the concert of the National Symphony Orchestra on Sunday, occupied a stage box and was very enthusiastic in her applause.

Dr. Koussevitzky was in fine form and gave an inspired reading of the Brahms symphony, each of its four movements vying in beauty and melodic tone pictures with the other.

The audience was won also by the Ravel number. The ballet from "Daphnis and Chloe," with its tremendous finale. An illustrated alphabet by N. Tcherepnin, typically Russian music, also pleased the audience, while Corelli's dainty suite with three enchanting movements completed the comprehensive concert.

WEDNESDAY FEBRUARY 3, 1932 SPORTS

EASTERN ROUTS WESTERN FIVE TO TIE SERIES LEAD

This MORNING with SHIRLEY L. POVICH

AMONG the deep-seated plans of the Washington Ball Club for the 1932 pennant race is included a serious bid for the patronage of Baltimore fans, previously enjoyed by the Philadelphia Athletics.

The recent trafficking in Baltimore Oriole players by Mr. Clark Griffith, owner of the Nats, portends a deliberate effort to wean away from the Athletics the attendance from Baltimore which has spilled many dollars into the coffers of the Philadelphia club in the past five years and which Washington in the past has shared only when the Athletics were the attraction at Griffith Stadium.

To that end the Nats have obtained from the Orioles Monte Weaver, favorite pitcher of the Baltimore public, and Ralph Boyle, outfielder, one of the most popular of the Oriole cast. Present plans call for Weaver to work in a generous share of Sunday games here, which with the recent improvement in the Washington-Baltimore boulevard which has reduced traveling time to less than an hour, should be a tremendous magnet for the patronage of Baltimore fans.

Connie Mack endeared his Athletics to Baltimore when he went into Oriole ranks for four members of his championship team. Lefty Grove was the first purchase and in his steps followed the second-base combination of Max Bishop and Joe Boley, and a year later big George Earnshaw joined the Philadelphia cast.

On occasions when the Athletics were in Washington for Sunday games, the Baltimore attendance approximated several thousand but the Nats' profit from this patronage was but a tithe of that enjoyed by the Philadelphia club which drew generously from Baltimore when playing at home throughout the season.

These Baltimore fans cheered lustily for the Athletics against the Nats and the workers in the Nats' front office just outside of the ball park proper were at a loss to learn the progress of the game from the yells that emanated from the park. Ordinarily the loud cheering meant a Washington hit of extra-base proportions when the Nats played most teams, but on a Sunday that found the Athletics here the same loud yells were apt to mean nothing less than the hailing of an error by Joe Cronin to the glee of the visiting Baltimoreans.

Not until the latter days of Jack Dunn's control of the Baltimore club would he have dealings with the Washington owners as a result of friction which arose over a player deal. During that period, Dunn's stars went to the Athletics almost without exception, but he previously had sent Babe Ruth up with the Boston Red Sox.

Dunn mellowed in 1929 and sold another of his pitching stars, Guy Cantrell, to the Nats for a reported price of $50,000, but the Washington club never benefited from the sale for Judge Landis decreed Cantrell a free agent on the charge that the trade was an "undercover" deal. Later Cantrell sold himself to the Toronto club for $6,000, which he was able to pocket.

Since Dunn's death, Washington has dealt extensively with George Weiss, who succeeded to the presidency of the Baltimore club, and in the course of the trading acquired Johnny Gill from the Orioles in addition to Weaver and Boyle. Gill is now with Chattanooga, Washington farm. From the Nats the Orioles in recent years acquired Stuffy Stewart, Pinky Hargrave, Harry Rice and Baxter Jordan. Early last year, before Joe Judge was stricken with appendicitis, the Nats loaned Joe Kuhel to the Baltimore team when its regular first baseman, Joe Hauser, was injured.

Levinsky Spurns Bout Offered With Dempsey

Chicago, Feb. 2 (U.P.).—An offer of $5,000 failed to entice King Levinsky, Chicago heavyweight, to sign today to meet Jack Dempsey in a four-round exhibition bout at the Chicago Stadium, February 18.

Mrs. Lena Levy, Levinsky's sister and manager, said Levinsky was tired from recent bouts with Paulino Uzcudun and Max Baer and needed a vacation. She did, however, reserve her final decision until tomorrow.

The guarantee offered Levinsky is at the rate of $1,250 per round, $416.67 per minute and $67.24 per second.

Bennies Hold Second By Beating Strayer's

Ben Franklin strengthened its hold on second place in the Washington Collegiate Conference last night and placed itself in a strategic position for a possible tie for first place with the league-leading Bliss Electric School by nosing out Strayer's, 23 to 18. The winners led, 13 to 8, at the half.

Old Line Five Battles C. U. Tonight

Maryland, Favorite, Seeks 8th Straight Court Triumph.

By JACK ESPEY.

ONE of the few athletic contests scheduled between colleges of the Capital area is on the card tonight at Ritchie Coliseum at College Park, where Maryland University's Southern Conference basket ball champions engage Catholic University's five, beginning at 8:15 o'clock. Since these schools are warm rivals, a closely contested game is anticipated, although Maryland is heavily favored by past performances.

Maryland must win to keep intact its winning streak, which at present covers seven games. Coach Burton Shipley's players will perform minus the services of their star center, Rufus Vincent, but with the veteran Jack Norris available to plug the gap, the Old Liners should not suffer a great deal. Norris replaced Vincent when the latter injured his ankle last Saturday night and carried on in a style that left little room for criticism.

Cards Cherish Victory.

The Cardinals are eager for the fray and feel confident, though they realize that Maryland is a proficient combination. A win over the Old Liners will prove most gratifying to the Brooklanders and their coach, Forrest Cotton.

Coach Cotton yesterday inserted Bob McVean at guard in the C. U. line-up with pleasing results. McVean's presence strengthens the Cardinals both on attack and defense. He is a good shot and a capable man under the rivals' basket.

Maryland will line up with George Chalmers and Ed Ronkin, forwards; Norris, center, and Bozie Berger and Bucky Buscher, guards. Catholic's combination will be: Bus Sheary and Joe Cannizzaro, forwards; Dick Gallaher, center, and Ed White and McVean, guards.

Loyola Host to Georgetown.

The only other game scheduled tonight involving a Capital team will be played in Baltimore, where Georgetown encounters Loyola. The Hilltop quintet has lost its last seven games, several by small margins, and is not facing anything of a set-up tonight. Loyola has to its credit a victory over Maryland this season and is at present one of the leading contenders for the Maryland State collegiate championship. Last year the Baltimore club overpowered the Blue and Gray, 54 to 28.

Dempsey Pummels Pair In Exhibition on Coast

"Bad News" Johnson, 195, Bakersfield, Calif., was stopped by Dempsey in the third round. Wally Hunt, 200, Los Angeles, took a severe beating during the fourth and final round of the other exhibition. The bell saved him from a knockout.

Government League Lists 4 Games Tonight

In an effort to complete the first half schedule four games have been carded tonight in the National Federation of Federal Employes Government Basket Ball League.

At 7 p. m. Bolling Field will engage Naval Hospital at Central High, while G. P. O. and Union Printers tangle in the Eastern gym at 9. Two tilts at Bolling Field will start at 8 p. m., Commerce facing Patent Office and Interior taking on Investigation in the nightcap.

It is estimated that almost the entire body of the Government League will see service in the A. A. U. tournament, entries for which closed yesterday.

Schaaf 8-5 Favorite Over Paulino Friday

New York, Feb. 2 (A.P.).—Max Baer, California heavyweight, will fight the winner of Friday night's Ernie Schaaf-Paulino Uzcudun bout in mid-March as scheduled, Jimmy Johnston announced tonight, denying reports of a break between Baer and Madison Square Garden.

Johnston, manager of boxing at the garden, explained that Baer had gone to Los Angeles for a bout February 22. He will return to New York after this match and prepare to meet Friday night's winner.

Schaaf, of Boston, is an 8 to 5 favorite to defeat Uzcudun, of Spain. If Schaaf meets Baer, the winner will act as alternate for Jack Sharkey in his title match with Max Schmeling, heavyweight champion, at Yankee Stadium in June.

4 Germans Hurt as Sled Dives 150 Feet Off Course

Five minutes before the German bobsled team cracked up on the treacherous Olympic run, critically injuring two members, Edward J. Neil, Associated Press staff man, covered the course in a mile-a-minute dash with Hasry Homberger, American pilot. He was an eyewitness to the latest smash-up immediately afterward and describes his experiences herewith.

LAKE PLACID, N. Y., Feb. 2 (A.P.).—Hospital authorities tonight announced that Albert Brehme, 27-year-old brakeman on the German Olympic four-man bobsled that crashed through a curve on the run today, was in a dangerous condition with a fractured skull, broken right wrist, severely injured spine, and lacerations of the face.

Capt. Fritz Grau, pilot of the crew, was "seriously" hurt, hospital authorities said. The 37-year-old Berlin radio manufacturer suffered fractures of the right shoulder and hip, concussion of the brain, lacerations.

Two Teammates Also Injured.

Two team mates were less seriously injured and were said to be in no danger. Hellmuth Hoppmann, typewriter manufacturer in Braunschweid, suffered severe leg lacerations, possible internal injuries and lacerations.

Rudolf Krotki, masseur for the team and a substitute today, strained his back.

The accident was the second to the German bobsledders and left only Hans Kilian to pilot the last of the sleds that were considered most dangerous to American supremacy in the winter Olympics starting Thursday. Capt. Werner Zahn broke his left arm and Dr. Hans Mehlhorn fractured a hand when the first German bob crashed Sunday.

The smash-up today, most spectacular and serious in the two-year history of the slide, occurred at Shady Corner, a vertical ice turn 28 feet high. Grau apparently lost control going into the curve at a speed estimated at 70 miles an hour. He crashed through the top and was flung with his mates 150 feet into a deep ravine on the side of Mount Hoevenberg.

Other Mishaps Mark Day.

Despite steadily falling snow at the time, all bob runners continued practice. Reto Capadruitt, young Swiss driver, tore 10 feet off the top of the same turn, but stayed on the course. Two Belgians tumbled off a bobsled and the sled finished the trip alone, taking all courses perfectly and being timed in 2 minutes 30 seconds for the full 1½-mile run.

Considerable discussion has been caused by the use by German and other foreign teams of bobs designed for the European snow course. The runners are more round than the skate-like runners of American sleds.

By EDWARD J. NEIL.

LAKE PLACID, N. Y., Feb. 2 (A.P.).—They took me down the most dangerous mile and a half in the entire sports world today, gave me thrills enough to last a lifetime, and then before my eyes laid the picture of sudden death and destruction that might well have come to me from less capable hands.

It was 7 o'clock in the morning, deadly cold on the top of Mount Van Hoevenberg, and the bobsledders of eight nations, men who can't have nerves, laughed and chatted in a polygot of French, German, Swiss, Roumanian, Belgian, Italian, Austrian and English.

At their feet lay the Frankenstein contraptions known as bobsleds, 500 pounds of steel and oak. In the air was a fine mist of snow. We were at the start of the Olympic bob slide, the mile and a half of glare ice twisting through 25 awesome bends and hairpin curves down the mountainside, the racing strip that in two days has sent eight Germans to the hospital. Today it all but killed two of them.

Way Is Cleared By Telephone.

Harry—they call him Hank—winks. "You asked for it, let's go."

He's just a pleasant kid, 26 years old, but a civil engineer from Saranac Lake, the fellow who built this slide. He is pilot, four lives and a steering wheel in his grasp.

They say he's the greatest bobsled driver in the history of the sport, dark, keen-eyed, quiet. He is the Albie Booth of bobsleds, 158 pounds, but his shoulders are the widest in the crew. His world record is 1:52 for 1½ miles.

Up comes the sled; we pull on brilliant red jackets, yank on red leather helmets that cover the face entirely, leaving only slits for eyes and mouth.

Bade Good-by by Foreigners.

Hank climbs behind the wheel; we settle and the sled, bracing feet, gripping the straps on the side with hands shielded in padded gloves. I was No. 3, sandwiched in between huge Percy Bryant and the brake-

TECH UPSET, 25 TO 12, BY ST. JOHN

Scanlon, Scheele and McCarthy Star in Cadets' Victory.

ST. JOHN'S CADETS, threatening all year to break into the upper circle of scholastic basket ball, bloomed out in stunning style yesterday to upset Tech, joint leaders of the high school series, by a score of 25-12. The game was played at St. John's, and marked Tech's third loss in fifteen starts this year.

Mike Scanlon's opportune long shots, and the consistent shooting of Fred Scheele and McCarthy, coupled with beautiful defensive work, gave the Cadets their important win. The victory was all the more surprising because St. John's was unexpectedly defeated in its last time out by Georgetown Prep.

Tech Outplayed Near End.

Using all of its first team except Jim Reed, center, Tech was cleanly outplayed in the final stages of the game by the inspired work of the Johnnies. Tech forged out to an 8-5 lead at the half, mostly through the foul shooting of Daly, center. With the coming of the third quarter St. John's proved an insurmountable defensive team. Tech, normally a high-scoring team, could sink but one field goal during the entire half. By the end of the third quarter St. John's was ahead, 16-12.

Daytona Making Roman Holiday Of Auto Test, Is British Charge

NEW YORK, Feb. 2 (A.P.).—Another international controversy, this one over the sportsmanship of Americans, was precipitated by the London Daily Herald today as Sir Malcolm Campbell sailed for New York and Daytona Beach, Fla., to attempt to raise his own world automobile speed record.

The Herald, apparently under the impression the authorities of Daytona Beach were lengthening the stretch of sand available for the run without consulting Campbell, charged them with attempting to make the record attempt a Roman holiday and increasing the hazards merely to attract visitors.

Campbell's American manager, Bill Stural, was quick to point out that Sir Malcolm himself had asked that the run be lengthened to give him a better start before entering the measured mile. Mayor E. H. Armstrong, of Daytona Beach, pointed to the same fact and said the London paper's charges were "ridiculous."

Campbell's car, the Bluebird, in which he set the present record at Daytona Beach last spring, was due in New York tomorrow aboard the Aquitania.

8th STRAIGHT IS WON BY AMERICAN

Extended to Win Over Randolph-Macon Five, 27-21.

AMERICAN UNIVERSITY'S machine-like basketers mowed down their eighth straight victim last night, defeating Randolph-Macon College for the second time this season by a score of 27 to 21, on the Massachusetts Avenue Heights floor.

In keeping their slate clean, the Eagles found themselves in sore straits on two occasions, but they finally managed to hit on all twelve in the second half to place the game beyond the Yellow Jackets' recall. The visitors, who lost the earlier clash by 37 to 20 on their own court, took advantage of some lethargic work on the home team's part to take the lead by one point margin in the first session, and again in the second.

Olsen's Long Shot Helps.

Reds Olsen, dependable guard, potted a long shot to pull American from behind midway in the opening chapter. This sent the score to 6 to 5, following which Lionel Dick caged one from beneath. Olsen and Sells piled up four more points before intermission, while Beall and Sergeant each scored a two-pointer for Randolph-Macon.

On Beall's fielder and foul, plus a charity flip by Wright, the Yellow Jackets took the lead, 13 to 12, five minutes after the start of the second half. At this stage the Eagles put on a spurt, initiated when Olsen passed to Fuchs for a "snowbird," and within the next ten minutes the home clan was riding ahead on a 12-point advantage. Sergeant and Beall, just before the final whistle, inserted field goals for the invaders with dribbles the length of the floor.

Ball Players Face Fines By League

2 Umpires Dismissed; Each Club Limited to 500 Passes.

NEW YORK, Feb. 2 (A.P.).—Hereafter, any National League player caught in the act of talking to a spectator or posing for a photograph with a cash customer will be subject to a heavy fine, it was decreed at the annual midwinter meeting of the senior circuit here today.

The league had a similar ruling last season, but no fine was attached, so the players took it none too seriously. From now on, the league means business, President John Heydler declared.

It seems that one of the league's better known players consented last fall to pose in the act of shaking hands with one of the Midwest's better known gangsters. It appeared in the papers. The league fathers disapproved.

Two Umpires Dismissed.

Following the American League's lead, the National voted to reduce its staff of umpires to ten, cutting off two jobs. Those named were William J. Klem, Charles Rigler, E. C. Quigley, Charles Moran, Charles Pfirman, John Reardon, Albert Stark, George Magerkurth, Charles Donnelly and George Barr.

The league passed a resolution limiting each member club to the issuance of 500 seasonal passes and adopted a schedule of 154 games submitted by President Heydler. For the third season, Walter F. Carter was appointed a fifth, or controlling director, of the Brooklyn Club.

Branch Rickey, president of the St. Louis Cardinals and the National League's representative on the committee to investigate the condition of minor leagues, made a voluminous report, but what he had to say was not disclosed.

The meeting adjourned out of respect to William Wrigley, jr., former owner of the Chicago Cubs, who died last week at Phoenix.

Mississippi Is Firm In Ban on Dempsey

Gulfport, Miss., Feb. 2 (A.P.).—Luther W. Maples, head of the Mississippi athletic commission, today denied reports from Chicago that the commission is ready to forgive Jack Dempsey if Dempsey will pay debts "he allegedly contracted at Columbus and neglected to settle."

Dispatches reported that Col. H. J. Landry, a member of the Mississippi commission, told the national boxing commisson that Dempsey's offer to pay the bills is "fair enough."

In answer to Col. Landry's statement, Maples said he was "not in favor of a compromise with Dempsey."

"I am ready to ga to Chicago to be present at a hearing Saturday with affidavits and evidence which the Mississippi commission has already gone to considerable expense to make in its case," he added.

County Court Title Won by Hyattsville

Hyattsville High's Basket Ball Team, defending champions, won the Prince George's County High School Basket Ball championship, yesterday afternoon when the Mount Rainier High Five was defeated 13-7 in a game played at the National Guard Armory in Hyattsville.

More defensive play than shooting was the motif of the game. Not a point was scored in the first quarter, Hyattsville led 6-2 at the half, Mount Rainier tied it up, 6-6, midway in the third quarter on some offensive play by Ziegler and F. Mathias, but quickly fell behind. Sammy Townsend was the punch of the winning team.

Both boys and girls teams will play in the State tournament beginning March 1.

CANADA 1ST U. S. FOE IN CUP PLAY

Davis Tennis Draw Is Made in Paris by French President.

PARIS, Feb. 2 (A.P.).—The draw for Davis Cup play of 1932, made today in the Elysee Palace by President Paul Doumer, of France, and the ambassadors of the 30 countries entered for this year's tennis classic, brought no advantage to the probable interzone finalists, United States and England.

Each country's team must play four matches, providing there are no upsets along the way, before meeting here in Roland Garros Stadium, in another battle for the right to challenge France for the famous cup.

England Draws First Round Bye.

England drew a first-round bye in the European zone and will meet Roumania in a second-round match. The United States will play Canada in the first-round match in the North American zone, where only five nations are entered, as against 22 in the European zone.

The United States is an overwhelming favorite to defeat Canada, Mexico and the winner of the Australia-Cuba match and then dispose of the South American victor in the American zone final.

France's Davis Cup squad, headed by Capt. Rene Lacoste, Henri Cochet, Jean Borotra and Jacques Brugnon, also was present. With all but Cochet only doubtful quantities this year, many experts believe the winner of the interzone final will defeat the Frenchmen and take from them the cup they won in 1927.

North American Play Starts In May.

The list of countries entered differs in only three places from last year's list. India, Cuba and Australia take the places of Argentina, Uruguay and South Africa.

Play in the North American and European zones begins in May, with the interzone final and the challenge round at Paris in July.

Worcestor, Mass., Feb. 2 (A.P.).—Lou Brouillard, welterweight, who lost his world title to Jackie Fields in Chicago last Thursday night, was ordered to St. Vincent Hospital tonight by Dr. J. R. Barnes after an X-ray examination. Physicians said he appeared to have torn muscles.

His manager said the injury was sustained when he was fouled December 10, fighting Paul Perone in Cleveland.

SHORE LEADS SCHOLASTIC SCORERS

Business Guard Has 74 Points to Credit; Nears 1931 High.

CARROLL SHORE, Business guard, took the lead again in the high school series high scoring ranks yesterday afternoon when he garnered eight points while his team was being beaten by Central. He replaces Billy Burke, of Central, who will play no more series games because of scholastic deficiency.

Sharkey and Schmeling Post $25,000 Forfeits for Battle

NEW YORK, Feb. 2 (U.P.).—The long-awaited signing of articles for the Max Schmeling-Jack Sharkey heavyweight championship bout this summer was consummated today.

While most other such milestones in pugilistic history are passed to the accompaniment of varied kinds of hooey intended to produce favorable publicity, this one had all the glamour of a marriage before a justice of the peace.

Representatives of Max Schmeling which is to say Joe Jacobs and friends, and representatives of Jack Sharkey, i. e., Johnny Buckley and lawyers, met in the offices of the New York State Athletic Commission. They agreed to fight fifteen rounds for the title held by Schmeling at the Yankee Stadium on the night of June 16.

William Francis Carey, president of the Garden, told the United Press that no definite plans other than date and place have been made. He admitted, however, that there is every prospect of a lower scale of admission charges in keeping with the times.

By BOB CONSIDINE.

IN a lackluster exhibition of basket ball, Eastern went into a first place tie with Tech in the high school series yesterday by beating Western in a weary sort of game, 35-14. Central aroused about 500 fans from a sound slumber late in the day by rushing past Business with the speed and power of a wheel sprung loose from a fast express to win, 45-25.

Western, weak in the first place, was reduced to the caliber of a third-rate sandlot club by the absence of Everett Buscher, Payne and Molyneaux. All it had was Anthony Latona, and an infallible ability to miss shots and throw the ball into the hands of Eastern. Latona scored half of the 14 points, whipping in the only baskets of the day which could be classed as out of the ordinary.

Eastern, playing raggedly against opponents twice as ragged, stumbled through to an easy victory. It led 7-1 at the quarter, 18-8 at the half and 24-12 at the end of the third quarter. Its cleanest shot proved to be Al Waters, who has played but minor roles in Eastern's successe. this year. Waters looped in 16 points and played a reasonably good floor game.

Passing of Eastern Dazzles Western.

The Eastern Club passed easily around, in, and between Western, which, with Latona's exception accepted defeat from the start. The only cheer of the game developed when a couple of players spilled Umpire Joe Mitchell and sent the popular official horizontal.

A tremendously powerful Central offensive, starting midway in the third period with the score 21-13 in Business' favor, swept the doughty Stenogs into discard in the second game. Business, utterly routed, could score but 4 points during the remaining fifteen minutes, while Central, unleashing a veritable demon in Jack Moulton, successor to Billy Burke, sent 24 perfectly delivered points singing down through the netting.

VANDERPOOL GIVEN WEAK RIDE AND BROWN WISDOM WINS

Aged Gelding Gains Neck Decision

HIALEAH PARK, Fla., Feb. 2 (A.P.).—Brown Wisdom, 7-year-old gelding from the stable of W. C. & E. W. Reichert, chalked up another feature race victory for the West when he got up in a whirlwind finish to beat W. M. Moore's Vanderpool by a neck in the Sunny Isle Purse here today. French Lass accounted for third money, a length away.

Brown Wisdom paid $10.30 for $2 and completed the 6-furlong trip in the fast time of 1:11 1-5. Tommy Malley, who had the leg up on Vanderpool, prohibitive choice, did not ride one of his usual strong finishes as the Campfire colt might have stuck it out to win. The winner, however, was obviously best.

Claremont showed surprising speed for an outsider, showing the way to French Lass and Vanderpool by a slight margin in the early running. Vanderpool was on the outside as the three horses sped along little more than heads apart to the head of the stretch. After straightening out, Malley sent Vanderpool into command as Claremont called quits. Brown Wisdom, outrun for a half mile, sailed around the outside and began to gain ground with amazing quickness through the final furlong. Charlie Allen rode the veteran hard and the bearer of the green and white silks got up in the last few strides.

Whitney Horses Dominate At New Orleans.

NEW ORLEANS, La., Feb. 2 (A.P.).—Thoroughbreds from stables owned by the Whitney clan dominated the program at the Fair Grounds today as they finished one, two in the Bayou St. Johns Purse and second in the Pompom Purse.

Mrs. Payne Whitney's Surfboard, an outstanding 3-year-old last year, ran the mile in 1:39 2-5 to take the Bayou St Johns Purse by one and one-half lengths from C. V. Whitney's Bargello. Angry, a stablemate of Bargello, finished second to E. R. Bradley's Broad Meadows in the Pompom Purse, which was decided over six furlongs. Broad Meadows ran the distance in 1:13 1-5.

Surf Board, making his second start of the meeting, took the lead at the three-quarter pole in the mile feature and steadily drew away from Bargello. The latter was consistent winner for C. V. Whitney on the mid-Western turf last year. Frank Sefemba's Etonardo was third.

Broad Meadows had much the better of Angry, finishing three lengths in front of the Whitney 5-year-old son of John P. Grier, with Sergt. Donaldson third.

Both of the winners were well supported, Surf Board paying $5.40 and Broad Meadows $5.60.

Gun Man Takes Feature At Havana.

HAVANA, Cuba, Feb. 2 (A.P.).—Gun Man, a 5-year-old son of Man o' War, which races for L. H. Minor, accounted for the 6-furlong feature of an all-claiming program at Oriental Park.

Under the guidance of Johnny Gilbert, Gun Man ran the distance in 1:13 3-5, easily defeating H. S. Friedlein's Quorum with the Blue Star Stable's Judge Dixon third. The winner paid 3 to 1. Gilbert held Gun Man back into third place to the far turn, where he went out in front and opened up a long lead. He had plenty of speed in reserve to ward off the belated challenge of Quorum, which ran in second place for the greater part of the distance.

GENERAL A. carried INFERNO LAD along at a rapid pace in run down the back stretch. Shook off opposition rounding the far turn and hugged the rail at top of home stretch. He was hustled along all last furlong. FELAXE bore out and finished in the middle of the track. INFERNO LAD raced well in hand in early stages, but collapsed when called on. He may have been short.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—MINT DRIFT (field), $6.80, $3.20, $2.70; LADY BRACADALE, $9.20, $6.10; SEMI PRECIOUS, $2.90.

MINT DRIFT broke well and was hustled along entire journey, bore over to inside going to furlong pole and LADY BRACADALE followed her in. Latter, a bit fractious at post, was taken to the extreme outside and did not break from the stalls. SEMI PRECIOUS ran straight and true after being a bit slow to find her stride. LAST BID, a good looker, may improve. JEAN BROWN, of very slow, closed a big gap. ALL PLAY broke well, but was bumped by MERRY MARYTIME.

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 3:20. Off at 3:21½. Winner, Marshall Fields's f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—SOBIEHA, $2.50, $2.30, $2.10; STRATEGY, $4.00, $2.60; ZEGORA, $3.00.

SOBIEHA, well in hand to top of home stretch, where she moved up and easily disposed of ZEGORA, drew away without effort last furlong. STRATEGY, outrun first half, worked his passage up on the outside and closed full of courage. ZEGORA broke well and drew away into an easy lead first furlong. Callahan saved ground with her all the way, but she collapsed when put to a drive. OIL QUEEN tired in stretch run.

FOURTH RACE—One mile. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For maiden 3-year-olds. Start poor. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:49. Off at 3:53½. Winner, George D. Widener's b. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—JAMES RIVER, $6.00, $3.00, $2.70; EL PUMA, $3.40, $3.20; MAKE SPEED, $3.00.

JAMES RIVER, breaking from the outside, moved up to the leaders with a rush first furlong, was then taken in hand to the stretch turn, where she went to the leader, tired after disposing of MAKE SPEED and had to be hard ridden to stall off EL PUMA. Latter raced next the inside rail on back stretch and met with interference. He closed resolutely and would have won a few more strides. MAKE SPEED weakened when the winner passed him. FULL SWING and SINGLE KAY were forward contenders in early stages.

FIFTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,300; allowances. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:22. Off at 4:24½. Winner, W. C. and E. W. Reichert's br. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—BROWN WISDOM, $10.30, $2.70, $2.20; VANDERPOOL, $2.30, $2.10; FRENCH LASS, $2.30.

BROWN WISDOM, outrun in early stages, was not hurried any until making turn into home stretch, where he was taken to outside, closed with a rush and was up in final strides. VANDERPOOL appeared to be going easily after disposing of FRENCH LASS, and Malley, probably a bit overconfident, would have won with more vigorous finish. FRENCH LASS, a keen factor all the way, had something taken out of her forcing the pace and racing CLAREMONT into submission.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good for all but Bird of Prey. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:49. Off at 4:51½. Two-dollar mutuels paid—BATTLING ON, $85.10, $35.10, $16.70; STARBOARD LIGHT, $27.20, $10.80; GRIFFIN, $3.20.

BATTLING ON, a forward contender from the start, came through on the inside at stretch turn and finished with good courage under punishment. He outlasted STARBOARD LIGHT in final drive. Latter made a determined challenge at furlong pole, but hung at end. GRIFFIN was messed about after breaking badly. TACK made a bid of usual racing. ATHOL into submission. ATHOL, under restraint in early stages, collapsed when called on.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 5:16. Off at 5:18. Winner, M. Lowenstein's ch. g. (5), by Stefan the Great—Rose Pompon. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $750; second, $150; third, $100. Time, 0:25, 0:49, 1:13 3-5, 1:40, 1:52 3-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—FETISH, $4.50, $2.80, $2.10; PUTTER, $3.60, $2.30; FAIR BILL, $2.10.

FETISH had the speed of the field and always held opposition safe. He took lead around first turn, was snugly rated in front and was not extended to maintain advantage through the stretch. PUTTER was kept in contending position, began to move up around third and closed well, but could not menace winner. FAIR BILL, slow at this stride, as usual, made up ground rapidly on outside in stretch. MIKE CAREY raced well up for a mile, then tired. PRETTY PENNY showed more early speed than usual, but flattened out badly under punishment after seven furlongs.

Boots and Saddle's
(Reg. U. S. Patent Office)
—Hialeah Selections—
By J. B. SNODGRASS

HIALEAH PARK, Miami, Fla., Feb. 2.—In line with the Hialeah policy of naming purses and stakes after local points of interest in Florida, the feature tomorrow at the Miami track is the Musa Isle Handicap, for 3-year-olds and upward, at one mile. A field of seven has been named for the race. The Greentree Stable holds a strong hand with the entry COMSTOCKERY and ESPINACA.

If COMSTOCKERY, which has interrupted his steeplechasing education for winter racing, celebrating his last start by defeating Vanderpool, repeats that race, or comes near doing so, he will win this in a canter. A mile is best suited to him. ESPINACA has a chance also, and together they form a strong team. MY DANDY is very fast and will be favorite, but the distance may be too far for him. This Western horse was second to Vanderpool last time out. ROYAL RUFFIN will like the distance and should hold the others safe.

FIRST RACE—SANSARICA looks best. He was second to Torealong a fortnight ago, his last start. STAR ROYAL has been running well with this kind, finishing third to Miss Avondale. GHOST DANCER will figure in the sprint, even on his last race, and should be third.

SECOND RACE—DRY RIDGE, a good looking 2-year-old which won his first start and came back with a close up third to Okapi, is best in the juvenile race. MEANY won his last start and will be the only danger to DRY RIDGE. WOCO should run back to his best race, which would give him third money.

THIRD RACE—Little class appears in the third at a mile and a furlong. NOINE has shown the best recent race of the lot, finishing third to Tea Cracker, which is none too strong a recommendation. GENIAL HOST should flash a shadow of his old form and may place. FAIR ALBERT'S last race was not bad.

FOURTH RACE—NANSEN, from the Marshall Field Stable, should win right back. He won his last in a fraction over 1:24, 7 furlongs, and that should make him best in this, though nothing stands out far. MY PURCHASE, winner over Jambalaya, is the contender. SHIVA, third to NANSEN last out, should be third to him again.

SIXTH RACE—PARTISAN, which drove home a close second to War Saint the other day, is due for brackets in the sixth. That race was a mile in 1:39, and PARTISAN was gaining at the end. SILVERY has been turning in good races and should be close up. Third money may go to ROAN ANTELOPE, uncertain, but speedy now and then.

SEVENTH RACE—BATTY is selected in the closing mile race. She beat Muff recently in 1:40, and later was beaten a head by Coady. She was owned until recently by the Greentree Stable and is by St. Germans, sire of Twenty Grand. STAR LASSIE is speedy and will be the contender. GLENSIDE is dangerous. He should annex third money.

BROWN SET FOR JACOBS BOUT

May Cancel Philly Go to Be at Best for Alexandria Test.

IN ORDER to assure his being in the best of shape for his eight-round match with Stumpy Jacobs at Portner's Arena next Tuesday night, Buster Brown, clever Baltimore lightweight, may cancel a performance scheduled Friday night in Philadelphia.

Brown is slated to meet Eddie Cool in the Quaker City two days hence, but his handlers advised during negotiations with the Day Nursery athletic committee that he would cancel the Cool match if possible. In Philadelphia last night it was stated that the Brown-Cool bout is still scheduled.

Brown Made Hit Last Time Here.

Brown has not been seen in action in this vicinity since last August when he outpointed Mike Sarko, of New York, at Mid-City Arena. On that occasion, the Baltimorean treated the fans to a fancy exhibition of boxing.

Brown's ring career is a brilliant one, though he never has been able to reach the top in his division. He has fought close bouts with many of the topnotchers, including Jack "Kid" Berg and Andre Routis, both of whom were world's champions at the time. Brown battled Benny Leonard about three months ago. Al Singer, former lightweight champion, refused to engage him last summer when Singer was seeking a shot at Tony Canzoneri.

That Jacobs is worthy of a match with Brown is not questioned. In addition to disposing of Burns, the Hopewell (Va.) flailer has beaten Lew Raymond, who performed sensationally at Portner's last Monday in defeating Sammy Braunstein.

One of the quartet of four-round preliminaries for next week's show was arranged yesterday between Billy Reed, promising local featherweight, and Tommy Horn, of Baltimore.

Godwin-Lawson May Be Matched.

Matchmaker Mann also revealed plans for subsequent shows, stating that efforts are being made to match Bob Godwin, Southern light heavyweight champion, with Bob Lawson, of Newport News, for February 16, and Natie Brown, recent conqueror of Marty Gallagher, with Herman Weiner, Baltimore left-hook artist, for February 23.

Tuesday night has been selected by the Day Nursery athletic committee as the most suitable time of the week to stage its shows in the future. The change from the Monday night policy, in vogue this week, was adopted at the request of several Alexandria social and business organizations whose regular meetings are held on Monday nights.

Agua Caliente Races Halted Due to Rains

Agua Caliente, Feb. 2 (U.P.). Racing at the Agua Caliente track will be suspended temporarily this week because of weather conditions, Tommy Gorman, assistant general manager of the track announced today.

Heavy rains have turned the track into a mud stretch and damaged roads to the track. Rumors that the remainder of the season, including the Agua Caliente Handicap, would be suspended, were denied.

ALEX. HIGH PLAYS FRIDAY.

Alexandria, Feb. 2.—The Alexandria High School courtmen will mix with the crack Fredericksburg Yellow Jackets in the feature scholastic game here Friday night. The winners will be declared the Third District champions.

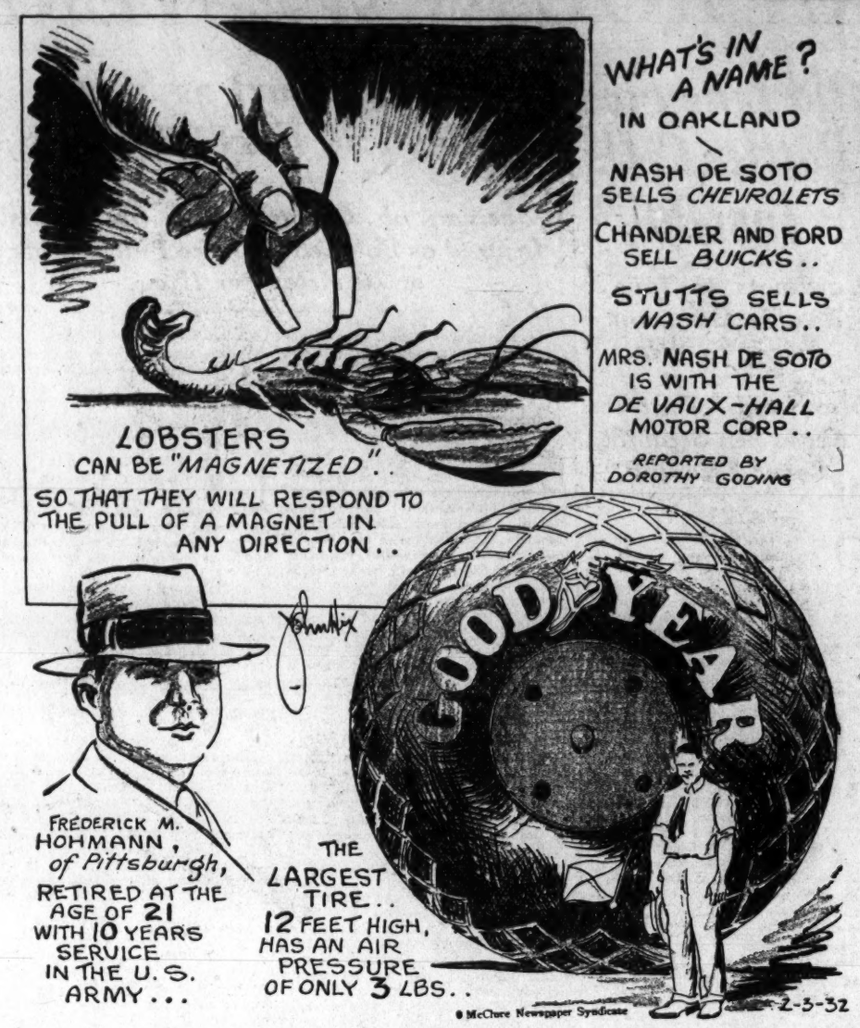
STRANGE AS IT SEEMS —By John Hix



IN a lobster's head there is a small cavity with a tiny opening. This is the creature's organ of balance, and without it, he can not tell whether he is right-side-up or upside-down.

Periodically, lobsters shed their heavy outside shells and grow new ones. It is at this time that the creature may be observed to scoop up sand with its feelers and sprinkle the grains over its body.

The lobster keeps bathing itself in sand in this manner until a few tiny grains have found their way into the small cavity in its head. Then its sense of equilibrium is restored. for gravity pulling on the sand grains tells the lobster which way is down.

But a lobster can be fooled. If all sand is removed and replaced with iron filings, the creature will fill its organ of balance with the filings.

If a magnet is held over the lobster, it will immediately turn over on its back. If the magnet is held undereneath, he will turn over again, or if it is held to the side, he will turn sideways, for the pull of the magnet is stronger than the pull of gravity.

The average small tire has a pressure of about 33 pounds, which is eleven times greater than the pressure of the largest tire ever built. This mammoth mass of rubber, which has a weight of nearly 2 tons, is 4 feet wide and 12 feet high. It is one of two huge pneumatic tires constructed by Goodyear, and made a tour of 12,000 miles, covering 24 States. It is now mounted over the main entrance of the Goodyear factory in Akron, and is kept continually in motion by a 1-horsepower motor.

TEAMS POINT FOR A. A. U. PLAY

7 D. C. Titles Listed for Decision

Entry of More Than 100 Teams Is Already Assured.

Courtmen Polishing Up Play for Big Event Next Month.

EVERY important amateur basket ball team in Washington, and the list runs well over 100, are chipping the rough edges off teamwork, brushing up on their passing and tuning up their shooting eyes with a view to being in the best possible shape when the big District A. A. U. basket ball tournament rolls around the first of next month.

If the big amateur tournament, annually sponsored by The Washington Post, has achieved nothing else in its six years of life, it has brought home to basket ball players in Washington the need of more organized teams, better equipment and sound tactics. Before The Post stepped into the local basket ball picture sheer chaos existed in District ranks. Teams were ill-fashioned and showed no willingness to meet good competition. There were no real "District champions." Games were played in poorly lighted, oversize or undersize gyms, with rarely a referee in sight.

Most Modern of Gyms Used.

Having changed all that, The Post pioneered new fields of basket ball perfection for the sandlotters. The tournament was moved to the most modern gym of its kind in this region. Tech High, stamped with the approval of the greatest organization of its type in the country, the Amateur Athletic Union, and presented on a large and impressive scale.

District championships in seven separate classes will be harder fought for this year than ever. Competing teams realize that team work and constant practice will go a long way toward reaching a championship in any of the fields. The elimination of hastily formed all-star aggregations brings even more emphasis upon greater organization on the part of every club entered.

From now until the tournament opens March 1, the teams will be pointing, for the big court rally, with a wide open field in prospect and the promise of keen competition for all. Entries will ring down February 23 and teams will be weighed in at the Boys' Club the following week.

By LEWIS F. ATCHISON

RUMORS that the Brunswick-Balke-Collender Co., nationally known bowling equipment supply house, intends to withdraw its support of the National Duckpin Congress following the national championship tournament to be held in Norfolk, Va., during the first three weeks of March, were confirmed last night by George L. Isemann, secretary of the congress.

The verification of the rumors, which have been rampant for the past two days, leaves the congress with but two alternatives, either to stand on its own feet or to pass out of existence. It will not be the latter if Isemann can help it. The energetic secretary of the organization, who has served in that capacity since the inception of the congress, blames the lack of cooperation of the alley owners and of the bowlers themselves for the present predicament. He pointed out that, although the congress has been practically supported by the Brunswick-Balke-Collender Co. since the start, the organization would have been able to take care of itself long ago had the proper cooperation been forthcoming from those who reaped the fruits of its existence. The owners are supposed to contribute $1 per alley per year to the congress and each bowler is supposed to join annually for the small sum of 50 cents.

Only a small group of the alley operators and some 300 bowlers have complied with this request. Of course, all bowlers are obliged to join the congress if they desire to compete in the national tournament, but the number who join merely for this purpose is small in comparison to the number who remain on the other side of the pale.

The national tournament is also a source of revenue for the congress, as a certain sum is deducted from the entrance fees and forwarded to headquarters to help defray the expenses. Last year the sum realized was said to be in the neighborhood of $400.

Should the organization pass out of existence, and there is a strong possibility that it will unless aid is offered, it will mean a return to the old days of disorganization and chaos in general. The work of the congress consists in fighting excessive State taxes, Sunday "blue" laws, which prohibit the operation of alleys on Sundays; issuing of a record book each year, standardization of bowling equipment, and the promotion of tournaments and sweepstakes.

The old and respected bowling gag, the one about "nine pins and a wiggle," eventuated once more last night when Charlie Hughes, mashed himself a pretty mess of maple in the East Washington Church League for a 157 game. One more pin and he would have tied the league mark. Two more and——

He had a 369 set. Team laurels were grabbed by Centennial No. 2 with a count of 1,633 of the wooden bottles.

The New Jerusalem Team, of the Masonic League, were the class last night at Convention Hall, shooting a 1,596 total, boosted along by a 142 game and 366 set by Wentz.

The Sioux scalped all rivals in the Indian Claims League, rolling heap big 537 and 1,537 scores. Zahn was high with 131 and 348. Respectable marks dotted the Odd Fellows league, too. Van Horn had 139 and 336 and the Central Team 550 and 522.

Quartermaster Corps took the spotlight from the Barracks Team of the Marines League and rolled 545 and 1,548 marks. Sutphin had 130 and Ramsberg 335. All these things came to pass at Convention Hall.

Howard Russell's 147 game and 375 set gave Emory the edge over Gunton Temple last night at Columbia in the North Washington Church League. Emory had 578 and 1,667. Team results were Central Presbyterian, 2; Wallace, 1. Columbia Heights, 2; Francis Asbury, 1, and Petworth Baptists, 2; First Reformed, 1.

Insurance League results were Acadia, 2, Peoples, 1; Aetna, 2, Equitable, 1; New York Life, 2, Massachusetts Mutual, 1;—Travellers, 2, Eureka, 1. Traveller had 550 and Peoples Life, 1,552. Spickann, of Peoples, leveled 157 and 336.

The National Capital League bowlers had a night off last night, and spent it bowling.

Mary Hughes' 127 game and 343 set topped the Eastern Star League. Her team, Mount Pleasant, took two from Good Will. The Ruth team toppled 1,461 pins in a set and Washington Centennial, No. 2, 510 in a game.

Union Wall Paper won the odd game from Lansburgh, No. 1, last night in the feature King Pin Business Men's League match.

The Agates, Picas and Minions, holders of first place in The Washington Post League, were treated unceremoniously by the also rans in yesterday's rollings at Lucky Strike. Agates took it on the chin, 2-1, from the Quads. The Gothics trimmed the Minions by the same count, and the Pearls completed the rout by winning all three from the Picas. That leaves the Agates and Minions tied, or something.

Kolb's 344 set, for Pearls, and Kinney's 342 for Gothics were high sets. Kinney had a 142 game.

Good scores marked the rollings of the Washington Ladies League last night at Columbia, where Margaret Leamon pounded the pins for a 343 total, while her team, the Columbians, were beating the last-place Veterans' Bureau. The Keenos beat the Cardinals, 2-1.

Sarah Updike's 134 game was high enough to cop individual honors, but her team, the Hilltoppers, lost to University Park, 2-1. Lorraine Gulli, of the winners, had a 333 set. The Beeques beat the Shamrocks, 2-1.

Brad Mandley toppled the bottles for a 385 set in the Columbia Heights League at Arcadia, and Talbert did not exactly hurt his league average with a 148 game in the Columbia Heights loop. Paramount Paint Co. ran away with team honors, taking marks of 609 and 1,740.

Also at Arcadia, in the Men's Lutheran League, Heim, of St. Paul, had a 143 game and 383 set. St. Mark's made marks of 575 and 1,609. Biggs' 121 game and Carmichael's 290 set were the best offerings in the Ladies Lutheran. The Lions, of the Post-office Department League, captured the lion's share of team honors with marks of 546 and 1,524. Kannahan had high game, just 124, and Steinheim high set, 329.

Section 3 of the North of Washington League functioned again last night at the Bethesda Alleys. Team results were Cardinals, 3, Wolfe Motors, 0; Zirkle Hardware, 3, Woodside, 0; Silver Spring Paint, 2, Brightwood Barbers, 1; Manor, 2, National Dyers and Cleaners, 1.

The Barbers had a 562 game and Manor a 1,566 set. Bachman, of Zirkle, was high with 134 and 388.

Lyceum, Virginia Fives in Big Game

Special to The Washington Post.

Alexandria, Va., Feb. 2—St. Mary's Lyceum tossers will engage the Virginians Wednesday in a crucial city loop contest for the possession of third place. The game will begin at 8:20 o'clock. Manager Tommy Lucas, of the Lyceum team, declared today that the Fraters would probably meet the Potomac Boat Club team in the preliminary contest at 7:30 o'clock.

An important meeting of the league managers was held today and it was decided to revise the schedule for the season. The following games have been arranged:

February 3, Virginians-Lyceum; 6, Columbias vs. Fraters; 10, Virginians-Columbias; 13, Fraters-Lyceum; 17, Columbias-Lyceum and Fraters-Virginians; 24, Virginians-Columbias.

March 2, Columbias-Fraters; 4, Lyceum-Virginians.

Those attending the meeting were managers, Lucas, Lyceum; Scrivener, Fraters; Jack Watt, Virginians, and Robert McDonald, Columbias.

Wednesday's game should be one of the best seen at armory this season. The Virginians have added several players, while the Lyceum club tossers have regained their stride. The starting Lyceum team will be selected from Lyons, Boran, Sinclair, Mumford, Gorman, Newton, Lucas and Thomas.

NAVAL RESERVES VICTORS.

RIVERDALE HIGHWAY TRANSFER IS SOUGHT

Prince Georges County Asked to Take Over Road in Heights Section.

The Prince Georges County commissioners yesterday appointed a committee to report on the need for having the road in Riverdale Heights, Md., taken over by the county, an action which had been requested by residents. The committee consists of C. L. Donaldson, Harry Lewis, and Frank Fierstien.

A. P. Talbert, John Snyder, and H. D. Carter, who appeared on behalf of a road from Bradbury Heights to the Bradbury Heights School, were told to find out how much the right of way would cost. They appeared before the board several months ago and were told to attempt to secure the right of way. Yesterday they said the owner of the land would not donate enough for a road.

A zoning petition asking that lot 12 on the Bewley estate in Berwyn be changed from Residential A to Commercial D was granted by the board. The petition, which has been approved by the Park and Planning Commission, was presented by Edward Daniels, agent for the owner.

The Mary Anna Pyles Memorial Women's Christian Temperance Union wrote the commissioners thanking them for refusing a license to certain "notorious gambling joints" which have figured in the news lately. The Union also asked them to be "strong and active" in suppression of such places. The communication was signed by Mrs. J. R. Allen, president, and Mrs. J. M. Everett, secretary.

Jail Search Fails To Bare Weapons

Reason for the recent search of the Marlboro jail by armed policemen was revealed yesterday when Baltimore police said they had warned Prince Georges County authorities to be wary of a jail break by Peter Abbott, held for the murder of a man during the Bladensburg teahouse holdup last November.

It was reported that Policeman Charles H. Lawrence, of Baltimore, had received a tip that Abbott, with the help of outsiders, would attempt to saw or shoot his way out of the jail. On receipt of a phone call, Sheriff W. C. Hopkins, with three other policemen, made a thorough search of the jail and prisoners, but found nothing.

The information received by Baltimore police was that a hacksaw blade had already been smuggled in to Abbott, but that he had been unable to cut the bars. Failing in this attempt, his friends planned to send him a pistol, with the intention of holding up the jailer. Abbott's communications are being carefully watched, but no special guard is being kept at the jail.

Valuable Clews Claimed As Biggs Denies Slaying

Although Prince Georges County authorities yesterday failed to break the story of Temple Biggs that he knows nothing of the murder of Barney McBride nearly ten years ago, they received valuable clews during the course of the four-hour grilling of the Camp Springs farmer, they said last night.

The hunt for the remains of the truck used to transport the body of the dead man, scheduled to begin yesterday, was not started. Sheriff W. C. Hopkins and all his deputies were busy in Marlboro nearly all day with hearings on other cases. Three persons have told police that Biggs had told them he participated in the slaying of the wealthy Oklahoma oil man, whose body was found in a culvert near Meadows, Md., in 1922.

Judaism's Ideals Urged by Speaker

Culture Must Continue Because of Economic Pressure, Samuel Says.

Pointing out that Jewish ideals, culture and philosophy were responsible for the race's survival and solidarity, the continuance of these qualities in a future when "economic pressure will be more bitter" was urged last night by Maurice Samuel, prominent author, in speaking before members of the Washington Zionist District at the Jewish Community Center.

There is more hate and bitterness between European nations than ever before, Mr. Samuel said. He placed the responsibility for this at a standardization of the external factors of life, and a consequent loss of those individual features which fulfill a national consciousness.

Other features on the evening's program were a short talk on Zionism by Isidore Hershfield and vocal selections by Albert Shefferman. John M. Safer, president, introduced the speakers.

Tinkham Privilege Plea Denied in Suit

Court Strikes Out Claim to Immunity in Reply to Bishop Cannon.

Justice Peyton Gordon, sitting in Motions Court, in the District Supreme Court, yesterday ordered stricken from the answer filed by Representative George Holden Tinkham to the suit for $500,000 brought against him by Bishop James Cannon, jr., that portion of Mr. Tinkham's answer that set up a plea of privilege.

The justice held that the pleading was bad, in that it was a "conclusion of law" and should not be considered in the pleading. Attorney Roger J. Whiteford, for Mr. Tinkham, got the permission of the court to file additional pleadings within ten days.

It was said that one of these additional pleas on behalf of Representative Tinkham would be that he was dared to make the statement by the bishop and that he, therefore, could not be held liable for making the statement reflecting on alleged violations of the corrupt practices act.

Fairfax Police to Provide Own Radio for Patrol Cars

Not to be outdone in the trend of modern police tactics for catching criminals fleeing the scene of their crimes in highpowered automobiles, the police of Fairfax County, Va., plan to equip their cars with short wave radio receiving sets.

The first difficulty encountered by the police in carrying their plan to completion was the fact that the county supervisors had no funds with which to aid them. Determined not to be thwarted by that handicap, the sheriff's deputies and the county traffic police put their heads together and after much deliberation, Sheriff E. P. Kirby announced that a solution had been worked out.

The police have agreed to pool their fees received in cases before the county circuit court and purchase radios for all police care themselves. Arrangements will then be made with the Washington Police Department to broadcast messages for local police over the police radio station there. There are eight police cars in Fairfax County, four under the sheriff and four in the county traffic squadron.

Sheriff Kirby states that Fairfax County has an area of 417 square miles and large portions of it are without telephone facilities. Now with radio equipment on the cars we will be in touch with our men at all times. Of course, if the county can find a way to help us purchase the sets all contributions will be gratefully accepted, but we are going to have the short wave sets in spite of the difficulties. Fairfax County is rapidly becoming suburban and our police problems grow more acute every day."

SALE OF ARLINGTON WATER SYSTEM HIT

ARLINGTON COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST.
Tel. Clar. 509. Clarendon, Va.

Any effort on the part of the Arlington County Board to sell or to consider the sale of any part of its water system to the incorporated town of Falls Church, as recently proposed, would endanger the entire county water system, which is being furnished by the Federal Government, declared Harry A. Saffell, of Clarendon, one of the prime movers in making it possible for the county to get its supply from the Federal Government.

"The law giving Arlington County permission to receive its supply of water is under the jurisdiction of the Secretary of War, and this supply can be cut off from Arlington County whenever the Secretary of War deems it advisable," he said.

"The organic law creating the water supply for the population of the District of Columbia from which the county gets its supply provides that under no circumstances shall water be sold at a profit by any individual or corporation."

In January 246 deeds were recorded in the Arlington County Clerk's Office, according to the monthly report yesterday. The tax to the State amounted to $932.80.

Other items in the report are: Wills, 6, State tax, $24.10; chancery suits, 20, State tax, $30; actions at law in the Circuit Court, 5, State tax, $7; actions at law in the county court, 42, tax to the county treasury, $47; prohibition fines in the Circuit Court, $50, costs totaling $40.75. Fines collected in the county court during the month for violation of the prohibition law amounted to $160, with costs totaling $117.95. Fines collected during the month in cases other than prohibition, were $100, with costs totaling $211.35.

Delinquent real estate taxes collected during the month, going to the State treasurer, amounted to $21.37; to the county treasurer, $164.14.

Proposals for the reduction of teachers' salaries in the public schools in Virginia, now before the General Assembly, met with strong opposition in the resolution adopted by the Arlington County Civic Federation at its meeting last night in the Lyon Park Community House. The resolution was offered by E. E. Naylor, delegate from the Lee Height's Civic League.

Another resolution given unanimous indrosement by the federation was one offered by the legislative and legal action committee, of which William D. Medley is the chairman, opposing any reduction in the salaries of Federal employes as now being considered by Congress.

County Manager Roy S. Braden, addressing the meeting and discussing county expenditures, called upon the delegates and all citizens of the county to make a thorough study of them.

STOCK PRICES DROP AFTER SLIGHT RALLY

New York, Feb. 2 (A.P.).—Stocks fell into an orderly retreat today after a rather feeble rally during the first hour. It did not take the market long to see that traders who had been supporting the "war babies" were much less interested in the fortunes of those issues, perhaps because of the peace move made by the leading powers.

The early rally died quietly, and the list sank into a slow decline which brought an average decline of about a point and a half. Sales totaled 1,119,682 shares; on only three days this year has volume exceeded 2,000,000 shares.

The market doubtless felt railroad stocks had had all the good news that could reasonably be expected for a time, for those issues were the first to give ground. Measures to strengthen the roads' financial positions are already at work, but improving traffic is another matter and movement of freight is still very slow. Car loadings in the week ended January 23 were off 10,338 cars from the preceding period.

Rails Lose Again.

Santa Fe and Union Pacific softened readily, the former losing 4 points, the latter 3½. Norfolk & Western, which covered its dividends with a couple of dollars to spare last year, was up 3, but net losses of a point or more in other prominent railroad shares were numerous.

Douglas Aircraft, United Aircraft, du Pont and Allied Chemical, prominent in Monday's boom, subsided 1 to 2. Coppers sagged under the uninspiring news of a record low price for export metal. American Telephone forfeited half of yesterday's rise, while U. S. Steel dropped 1⅝, closing fractionally under the price at which new stock is being offered to employes. American Can, ex-dividend, lost about 2. General Electric found the going heavy and came within an eighth of duplicating its recent low. General Motors, whose directors meet for dividend action tomorrow, was fairly steady, brokerage house opinion being divided as to whether the $3 annual rate would be maintained in the face of lower earnings.

Steel Operations Unchanged.

Early reports on steel operations for the entire country indicated little or no change for the current week. American Metal Market said the rate was holding at 27 per cent and that no strictly seasonal improvement had appeared with the exception of some gain in automobile requirements. The review believed railroads would need most of the benefits derived from wage reductions and higher freight charges for meeting fixed charges and would increase rail buying at only a slow pace.

The report of a leading mail order house for January indicated that with due allowances for price reductions business had held up reasonably well. Retailers generally are making strenuous efforts to move goods with the aid of sales, and with Easter coming early this year, some quarters are looking forward rather hopefully.

Money held firm, its normal tone so early in a month. It will not be long before preparations are started for the large settlements of March 1, among the heaviest of the year, especially in the Western farming districts. However, there is expected to be little change in actual rates here.

ELECTRIC COMPANY TO EXPAND PLANT

By THOMAS M. CAHILL.

Increasing business has caused Graybar Electric Co., Inc., to seek larger quarters, and it plans to move from its present three-story brick plant at 714 Twelfth street northwest to a large stone and brick structure to be built for it at 1119 Fourteenth street northwest, on property that has been leased for a possible term of 15 years through the office of Carl G. Rosinski, realtor. The projected plant will afford a frontage of 36 feet on Fourteenth street and 18,000 square feet of floor space.

Graybar Electric Co., Inc., an individual organization, was incorporated in New York in 1929, and its local unit opened May 1, 1930. C. D. McClary is manager of the local branch, and A. E. Kostuiski, service and credit manager.

The company has more than 70 branches in all parts of the country. While the company has operated under the Graybar name but three years, its business history as the original supply department of Western Electric Co. goes back more than 50 years. Frederic Pyle will be the architect of the new structure.

Utilities File Statements.

Three utility firms filed their December and yearly statements of operations with the Public Utilities Commission yesterday. Georgetown Gas Light Co. showed a net income for December of $17,051.14, as compared with one of $9,869.35 for the month in 1930. Net income for the twelve months totaled $135,108.27, as contrasted with one of $156,592.24 for the corresponding period in 1930.

The statement of Washington Gas Light Co. listed December net income of $119,331.58, as against $8,437.34 for the month a year before. For 1931, net income rose to $1,141,834.83, an advance from $743,536.29 total for 1930.

The net income item of Washington Rapid Transit Co. for December revealed a deficit of $5,775.54, in comparison with a deficit of $3,867.90 for the month in 1930. For the year 1931 there is a deficit of $49,088.77, as compared with one of $27,910.65 for the preceding twelve months.

Store Trade Is Less.

Retail department store trade in Washington during December was 7.4 per cent less than that of the month in 1930, the monthly review of credit, business and agricultural conditions published yesterday by Chairman William W. Hoxton, of the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond, reveals.

The decline here was less than other cities of the Fifth Federal Reserve District, trade of Richmond stores being 12.3 per cent under that of December, 1930; that of Baltimore being 10.7 per cent behind, and that of other cities, 12.3 per cent off. Trade of the district, as a whole, showed a 9.7 per cent recession in the comparison.

Total sales for the District of Columbia for the year 1931 were 2.1 per cent under those of the preceding year, but here again the District appeared most favorable in the comparison. Richmond sales were 8.9 per cent off; Baltimore sales, 7.8 per cent off; other cities of the reserve district, 13.5 per cent off, and reserve district itself, 6.3 off.

Acacia Mutual's Report.

Commenting on the successful business year just closed by Acacia Mutual Life Association, President William Montgomery, of that association, in a report to the directorate, states: "We feel that the association is making a distinct and important contribution to the economic well-being of Washington. Our organization is in the very front rank of institutions here and that it is playing in the economic life of the Capital is felt in every circle.

"With an annual home office pay roll of more than $700,000, and giving employment to more than 400 persons in Washington alone, we are convinced that Acacia has established itself as one of the outstanding constructive forces of the community. We are confident that future events will serve only to emphasize this position."

Acacia, with branches in all principal centers throughout the country, recorded steady progress during 1931 in the face of generally adverse conditions, and it begins the new year well entrenched in all directions.

Next year President Montgomery will mark the fortieth year of his connection with Acacia Mutual Life Association. Virtually all of the four decades he has spent as the directing head of the organization which, under his guidance, has developed into one of the country's leading insurance companies.

A review issued by Hemphill, Noyes & Co., with local offices in the Shoreham Building, states: "The business situation outwardly shows little or no improvement, as registered by various indices of business activity. There is, of course, some seasonal improvement shown in certain industries, and sentiment is perhaps slightly better."

FEBRUARY 3, 1907.

Tokyo papers have printed a story saying that the Japanese Ambassador to the United States, Viscount Aoki, has given Secretary of State Root an ultimatum in regard to the segregation of Japanese students in the San Francisco schools. The papers continue on to talk of the possibility of war with the United States. No confirmation of the matter could be had in Washington.

When Washington Was Younger—No. 183

ON April 29, 1894, a ragged, weary army of 600 unemployed men and women entered the District and marched to the Capitol to endeavor to gain admittance to Congress, with Gen. Jacob S. Coxey and his chief lieutenant, Carl Browne, as their leaders.

This famous march was the result of the terrible depression and panic of 1893 and 1894, when the country was in the throes of poverty and despair. The long trek from Massillon, Ohio, was in vain, for when the marchers finally reached the Capitol they were not permitted to enter and Coxey was forbidden to read his speech on the steps of the Capitol. The above picture shows Coxey addressing his followers after police had refused him permission to read his written speech.

One of the wildest scenes in the history of the city was created at the Capitol when the army reached there and refused to obey the police command to disband. They attempted to charge up the main steps and police were forced to use their batons freely.

Coxey finally got his band in order and they marched to a camp site on M street between First and Second streets southwest, with thousands of citizens following and cheering this little band of desperate men who had marched 600 miles only to be deprived of their objective in the end.

Coxey, Browne and another lieutenant, Chistopher Columbus Jones, were arrested and later sentenced to twenty days in jail for violation of the law for the protection of the Capitol grounds. The army was leaderless and desperate and finally pitched a camp on the property of George W. Stegmaier, between Bladensburg and Hyattsville, and finally, some time in June, the army slowly disbanded and marched back to their homes.

A reminder of this march was the so-called hunger march on the city a few months ago, which also was a total failure. Coxey was present in the city at this time and viewed this throng as they paraded to the Capitol grounds with their banners demanding work.

SCHOOL FARES CLAUSE IS URGED BY CLAYTON

Sightseeing Companies Protest Competition by Trolley Lines.

The traction merger bill, which passed serenely through House hearings without opposition, yesterday ran into a stone wall of protest at Senate District committee hearings, where more than a score of amendments were put forward by witnesses who took issue with provisions of the bill.

People's Counsel Richmond B. Keech launched the principal onslaught. He charged wording of the bill precluded other transportation agencies, notably taxicab lines, from coming into the city, extending the powers of the new company beyond all need. The company might even engage in the real estate business under the measure, he said.

He urged the substitution of a "simple bill" that would not treat the project in detail.

"Every time a consolidation measure is introduced here everything under the sun goes into it," he said.

He asked that ten of the fifteen directors of the consolidated company be residents of the District instead of a mere majority and urged limitation on the company's authority to extend present power contracts.

Senator Opposes Simple Bill.

Senator Warren R. Austin (Republican), Vermont, took issue with his proposal of a "simple bill." He declared a general act would never take care of necessary details. He urged the bill be amended to give ample protection to minority stockholders, pointing out that any one of their number who dissented might tie up the whole merger project by court injunction.

Maj. Gen. Mason M. Patrick, chairman of the Public Utilities Commission, took the stand at the outset to suggest minor amendments, largely dealing with phraseology. He asked that "other forms of transportation" be stricken from the opening clause, regulating the extent of the merger.

People's Counsel Keech objected that this one omission was not sufficient to preclude the possibility of new transportation agencies being barred by the wording of the bill. The city would not have flat taxicab rates of 20 cents today if such a bill previously had been enacted into law, he said.

School Fare Clause Urged.

William McK. Clayton, chairman of the public utilties committee of the Federation of Citizens Associations, urged reinsertion of a clause providing reduced fares for school children. An appeal from congressional action establishing such fares is now pending, and if the court upholds the company's protest of the 3-cent limit, the Public Utilities Commission would have no authority to work out another base, he contended.

Mr. Clayton has five other amendments to offer. Chairman Arthur Capper (Republican), Kansas, promised him time to air them at subsequent hearings.

"We are not granting Federal charters to private corporations any more," he said. "I would not consent to it."

Protests that the traction companies are now in the sightseeing business in competition with established sightseeing companies and would be allowed to expand this business under the merger, were presented by Conrad Syme, representing the Capital Sightseeing Co. and the Grey Line Sightseeing Co., and Laurence Gassenheimer, president of the Green Line Co.

Sightseeing Lines Lose Trade.

Mr. Syme offered an amendment which he said would preclude the companies from chartering buses for sightseeing purposes. Mr. Gassenheimer, who said his company lost 25 per cent of its business last year because of traction line competition, said sightseeing agencies here must go out of business if the street railway lines are allowed to continue to compete.

Mr. Syme, in the course of his testimony, declared sightseeing agencies are not now under supervision of the Public Utilities Commission. Assistant Corporation Council William A. Roberts said the commission has regulatory power if it ever chooses to exert it.

Evan H. Tucker, of the Northeast Citizens Association; George Sullivan, of the Takoma Park (D. C.) Citizens Association, and Edwin Young, of the Logan-Thomas Circle Citizens Association and the Central Business Men's Association, testified to general approval of the merger principal, but each asked minor amendments.

Senator King commented that the "millennium" would arrive before Congress passed a merger bill satisfactory to District citizens.

Sensational Charges Made.

Testimony of a sensational character was presented by two witnesses. H. W. Lynn, who said he formerly was an employe of the Washington Railway & Electric Co., asked that the Public Utilities Commission be given jurisdiction over employe relief association maintained by the traction companies. He said he had been discharged by the Washington Railway & Electric Co. when he sought assets of a former employes' relief association that was disbanded years ago.

President E. D. Merrill threatened to oust him from a subsequent job if he testified at the last merger hearings, he charged. President William F. Ham of the Washington Railway & Electric Co. declared that his company's employes' relief association had undergone a change of name, but never disbanded.

C. C. Meyer, who told the committee he represented "the great mass of the public," said he was going to submit a confidential memorandum charging that "hush money" was paid out by the electric lines to certain papers here.

MOTORMAN VIEWING AUTO AFTER FATAL CRASH

Rifle Cash Register of $53 and Escape; Motorist Releases Victim.

Three bandits who locked the manager of a shoe store in a rear room of the shop last night, escaped with $53 cash. The manager, Clem Earl Osborn, of 1212 Hemlock street northwest, who was kept prisoner for almost half an hour, finally managed to attract the attention of a motorist parking in the alley and was freed.

Mr. Osborn was alone in the Hanover shoe store branch at 3122 Fourteenth street northwest, about 8 o'clock, when the trio entered. One of them pulled a pistol and ordered him to get into the rear room. When he obeyed the man turned the lock on him.

The three bandits then opened the cash register and got $50 in bills and $3 in change before they fled. Mr. Osborn tried for about half an hour to get out of his prison. Finally a man parked his automobile in the alley at the rear of the store and the store manager gained his attention by rapping on the window. The motorist came through the store and let Mr. Osborn out. The robbery was immediately reported to police.

Three men, one armed, made an unsuccessful attempt to hold up Robert R. Thompson, of Brookmont, Md., last night as he was northbound by automobile on the Little Falls road, between the National Training School for Girls and Conduit road. The man told Eighth Precinct police the men stepped from the woods and tried to halt him, but he speeded up and got away.

Circus Men Visit Washington's Zoo

Just as the kids do when they go to the circus, the owners ate hot dogs, munched peanuts and drank pop, and had a great time watching Dr. William M. Mann, director of the National Zoo, and Headkeeper Blackburn, put the animals through tricks. They also learned something new yesterday, that an African elephant can learn new tricks, when they watched the one at the zoo, the largest of its kind in captivity, go through a regular circus act and even lie down when told to do so by Mr. Blackburn.

The conference of the owners was called here to discuss plans for the coming season and to elect officers. Charles T. Hunt, owner of the Hunt's Three-Ring circus, was elected to succeed Al Wheeler, of Wheeler & Sautelle.

Two Men Are Held On Narcotic Count

Through the efforts of three Maryland State policemen yesterday, two men are in a Baltimore jail charged with violation of the narcotics laws and a quantity of drugs has been seized.

The two arrested are Dennis A Mahoney, 41 years old, of 415 Third street northwest, and Maliolie Ahmey, 35, of 2703 Bladensburg road northeast. They were arrested by Policemen Menash E. Katz and Arthur Plummer about half a mile from the Laurel substation on the Baltimore boulevard after being recognized in Baltimore by Corp. Louis Bloom, in charge of the substation. In addition to the drugs, whose wholesale value is about $200, the officers also found a needle, spoon and syringe outfit in the car occupied by the two men.

Child Suffers Broken Leg in 3-Story Fall

The fractured leg of Frances Worsham, 3 years old, of 110 Second street southeast, was being mended in Children's Hospital last night while her parents were expressing thanks that her three-story fall to the frozen front yard had resulted no more seriously.

The child took her long plunge through a pane of glass in the front room on the third story of her mother's home yesterday morning. Mrs. Mary Worsham, the mother, was in the kitchen peeling an apple for the child. In Mrs. Worsham's absence, Frances climbed up on the bed, which was close to the front window.

She was joyfully bouncing up and down on the springs. One bounce threw her too far. She was plunged through the pane down into the yard. Mrs. Worsham heard the crash and ran in to find her daughter gone. The Fire Rescue Squad was summoned and took Frances to the hospital. She suffered a compound fracture of the left leg and possible internal injuries, but physicians do not believe her condition is serious.

Citizens' Body Told Of Police Methods

The activities of the Police and Fire Departments of the District were explained by Commissioner Herbert B. Crosby last night at an unofficial dedication of the new Congress Heights School Auditorium, under the auspices of the Congress Heights Citizens Association.

Charles Stengle, of the District George Washington Bicentennial Commission, addressed the association wtih a resume of the Bicentennial program of the District Commission, and E. S. Hege, also of the commission, discussed the housing and parking conditions that will be created after February 22.

Peoples Counsel Richmond B. Keech was introduced and gave a short address on the proposed street car merger. W. D. Poole, of 3301 Brothers place southeast, was presented with a silver cup for having the best lighted house during the Christmas season. Entertainment was furnished by the school orchestra.

Police Heads Plan To Discuss Vacancy

Glassford and Inspectors to Consider Successor to Plemmons.

Brig. Gen. Pelham D. Glassford, chief of police, and a group of inspectors of the Police Department will confer today regarding the filling of a vacancy created by the retirement of Capt. C. L. Plemmons. Other matters regarding personnel promotions will be discussed also at the conference.

The three lieutenants highest in line for the post vacated by Capt. Plemmons are Richard Mansfield, Gustaf Lauten and J. W. Pierson. All are said to be regarded as qualified to fill the captaincy.

A practice in the past of picking men for higher posts in the department for other reasons than their civil service status is said to be looked upon with disfavor by the police chief. At today's discussion the promotion of privates to sergeantcies and sergeants to lieutenancies also will be taken up.

Bray Named to Succeed Rice.

James L. Bray was yesterday appointed director of the publishing department of the United States Daily to succeed John E. Rice, who recently died. Mr. Bray is a native of Sprigfield, Mass., and has been a resident of Washington for some years. He was at one time connected with the Internal Revenue Department.

Commission Acts to Bar Future Marathon Dances

Locking the stable door after the horse is stolen, the District Commissioners yesterday adopted a police regulation prohibiting marathon dances in Washington. The endurance dance contest, which was held at the Washington Auditorium, came to an end only last week after continuing from early in December.

The police regulation, drafted by Corporation Counsel William W. Bride, reads:

"No person shall conduct or take part in any race, dance or contest in which any individual shall participate for more than a total of 12 hours in any consecutive 24 hours."

FLEEING RUM AUTO HITS WOMAN'S CAR

Painful injuries were suffered by Mrs. Amelia Thomas, 33, of Silver Spring, Md., yesterday and her car badly damaged when a fleeing rum-laden machine crashed into her automobile at Sixteenth and Meridian place northwest.

Mrs. Thomas was taken to Garfield Hospital where it was said her injuries were not serious. Pete Ridley, 26, colored, of 2701 Dumbarton avenue northwest, was also injured slightly. He was apprehended a short while after the crash by Private J. I. Shatzberger, of the Sixth Precinct, who found him beneath the porch of a residence about a block away.

The chase began on the Brookeville pike about a mile from the District line. Montgomery County Policeman Robert Howes espied the car allegedly driven by Ridley and followed it into the District. Shortly thereafter Private Shatzberger, in a patrol car, joined the chase.

After attempts to evade his pursuit by driving through alleys, the car sped down Sixtee th street and was halted by the crash with Mrs. Thomas' car. Eighty-one half gallons of alleged whisky were in the machine. After treatment at Freedmen's Hospital, Ridley was locked up at the Sixth Precinct on charges of illegal possession, leaving after colliding and assault with an automobile.

Final Date Passed On 1931 Car Tags

License plates of 1931 went out of date at midnight last night, thus putting several thousand persons in the position of driving their cars at the risk of arrest and resultant fine.

During the sleet and snow of the morning and the damp afternoon weather yesterday, a line waited in front of Police Headquarters to obtain tags. More than 2,000 sets were estimated as having been issued during the day.

Because of the possible strain on the building—which recently come under the cognizance of building inspection authorities—only 25 persons were allowed at a time on the fourth floor.

Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer estimated that approximately 10,000 tags remain to be issued.

SWITCHMAN DEAD AFTER TROLLEY IS RAMMED BY AUTO

MOTORMAN IS KNOCKED FROM FEET BY IMPACT

J. E. Saunders, Widower and Father of Four Children, Expires in Hospital.

Injuries received when he was pinned between the rear of a street car and an automobile, which struck him as he was raising the car's overhead trolley at the plow-pit on Wisconsin avenue near P street northwest, proved fatal last night to John E. Saunders, 58-year-old switchman of the Washington Railway & Electric Co. He died an hour after the accident in Georgetown Hospital; both legs had been amputated in an effort to save his life.

Saunders, a widower and the father of four children, was standing in the center of the car tracks behind a street car, which had stopped at the pit to change from the underground to the overhead power line. As he prepared to raise the trolley, an automobile operated by Sinclair B. Fowler, 38 years old, of 1540 Seventeenth street northwest, crashed into the rear of the car, pinning Saunders between the two vehicles.

Rushed to Hospital.

So tightly was the machine wedged against the street car that bystanders, who hurried to the switchman's aid, were unable to free him for several minutes. The automobile was finally pushed back and Saunders was placed in a passing machine and rushed to the hospital.

Physicians found his legs so badly mangled that amputation was necessary. He suffered severe cuts and bruises to his face and head. He died at 9:30 o'clock.

According to witnesses, Fowler's machine was traveling at a high rate of speed. He apparently failed to see the street car, it was said, until too late to avoid the collision. Edward J. Teehan, of 3249 O street northwest, a passenger on the car, declared the force of the impact nearly threw him from his seat.

Traffic Is Tied Up.

A crowd of several hundred persons gathered and traffic along Wisconsin avenue was at a standstill for more than half an hour. John H. Wood, motorman of the street car and the only other occupant, was at the front of the car. He was knocked from his feet by the collision. Fowler's machine was badly damaged.

Saunders had been employed by the railway company for a number of years. His wife died some time ago, leaving him to care for four children, the oldest of whom is 15. He lived at 712 I street southeast.

Fowler, after receiving treatment for lacerations to his head, was taken to the Seventh Precinct station and held on an open charge pending action by Coroner Joseph D. Rogers.

Lincoln Museum Opens In Old Theater Feb. 12

The new Lincoln Museum on Tenth street, located in the old Ford Theater, will be opened to the public on Lincoln's Birthday, February 12, without any formal dedication exercises.

The old Oldroyd collection, now the property of the Government, is being arranged in its new home and the work will not be completed for several weeks.

Peabody School Student Is Bitten by Stray Collie

A Peabody School student was bitten by a stray collie dog yesterday while at play on the school grounds at Fifth and C streets northeast. The student, Thomas Powell, 9 years old, of 13 Second street northeast, was lacerated about the right wrist.

Young Powell was treated by Dr. J. S. Arnold, school physician. The dog escaped after attacking the child and is being sought by police and health authorities.

Lieut. Col. Barton K. Yount, of the Army Air Corps, will succeed Maj. Howard C. Davidson as commandant of Bolling Field, according to an order issued yesterday at the War Department.

Maj. Davidson, who has been here since January 4, 1928, will go to the Air Corps Tactical School at Montgomery, Ala., it is understood, although no orders have been issued, for advanced tactical training.

The change probably will not be effective until late next summer. Col. Yount is now on duty at Rockwell Field, California, as commandant. He has been ordered to proceed here, leaving San Francisco in the latter part of July.

Col. Yount was graduated from the Military Academy in 1907. He served as an infantry officer in China and later as military attache at Peking. He completed his flying training at Rockwell Field in 1919. He served as commanding officer of March Field, for two years and then came here in the office of the chief of the Air Corps. Later he was detailed to the embassy at Paris as air attache. He is married and has a son 12 years old.

When Maj. Davidson leaves Washington he will leave behind a host of friends in the various Government aviation departments. Under his command Bolling Field has been greatly improved, and only recently ambitious plans for the enlargement and further development of the airport were announced.

Maj. Davidson graduated from the Academy in 1913. He served with Pershing during the Mexican campaign, and during the World War he commanded the School of Military Aeronautics at Cornell University and later served in France. In 1922 he went to London as air attache and was assigned to Mitchel Field, N. Y., as operations officer before coming here.

CHAMBER INDORSES MOTOR SAFETY BILL

Also Supports Stand by Utilities Board for Taxi Meters.

The safety responsibility bill which will require proof of financial ability to settle claims of motorists who have failed to satisfy judgments arising from accidents was indorsed last night by the board of directors of the Washington Chamber of Commerce.

The board also approved a report which indorses the action of the Public Utilities Commission in maintaining its stand that meters should be placed on taxicabs, and further that the price of taxi rides should be commensurate with the service furnished. Issuance of certificates of convenience and necessity for taxicabs in order that the number of cabs on the street can be regulated also was urged. It was pointed out that New York City is the only city with more cabs than Washington.

The board approved a report of the public utilities committee, which urges the Senate District committee to take favorable action on the street car merger bill and reiterating the indorsement of such a move, which has been urged for years by the chamber. The board also opposed marathon dancing contests and urged that such contests be prohibited.

Amendment of the District law regarding cars abandoned in garages so that garage owners will be able to get rid of the cars with more ease than under the present law was urged in another resolution approved by the board. The present law requires court action if the car is valued at more than $50.

Mitchell Criticizes Rail Damage Plan

Attorney General Mitchell yesterday roundly criticized wording of two pending congressional resolutions seeking to settle damage claims of the Mount Vernon, Alexandria & Washington Railway Co. for tracks torn up in the path of the Government's triangle building program. The Attorney General declared the resolutions are not specific enough on the question of liability.

The report was forwarded to the Senate District committee, which will hold hearings on the resolution. Senator Warren R. Austin (Republican), Vermont, requested the Attorney General's opinion, when the bill recently was called up before the committee. A House District subcommittee already has held hearings on the resolution, and reported it favorably. It may be voted on at a meeting of the full House District committee at 10 o'clock this morning.

Attorney General Mitchell did not indicate what position he thought the committee should take on the question of damages, in his report to Senator Arthur Capper's District committee. He suggested that the resolution advise the court what formula should be used in apportioning damages between the District and Federal Governments.

FIRE LIEUTENANTS' TOTAL REDUCED 2

Minor Reorganization Will Create New Captain and Add Private.

The District Fire Department followed the Engineer Department yesterday and underwent a minor reorganization which provides for reducing the number of lieutenants by two and for the adding of one captain and one private to replace them.

Upon recommendation of Fire Chief George S. Watson the Commissioners yesterday approved the plan, which will result in a net saving of $780 for the first year and an ultimate minimum saving of $280 a year.

The change was brought about by the promotion of Stephen T. Porter from the rank of lentenant to that of captain last summer. Capt. Porter, who has been assigned to the Fire Department Training School since April 3, 1929, was retained in the school as first assistant to the drillmaster, even after his promotion, because of his particular ability in the field of instruction.

Consequently a lieutenant was designated as an acting captain and placed in command of a company to which Capt. Porter would ordinarily be assigned.

Chief Watson now proposes that this lieutenant be made a full captain and that the increased cost of $160 a year be met by assigning a private instead of a lieutenant to him as the chauffeur for his official car.

Lieut. K. W. Weston, his present aid, is to be retired for physical disability upon recommendation of the Board of Police and Fire Surgeons. A new private will be selected from the civil service list.

Self-Inflicted Cut Is Fatal to Woman

Mrs. Della Hackney, 48, Is Suicide at Home of Her Brother.

Culminating a prolonged nervous breakdown, Mrs. Della Hackney, 48 years old, fatally slashed her throat and wrists yesterday morning in the home of her brother, Maj. William F. Scheumann, 607 Whittier street northwest. A certificate of suicide was issued last night by Acting Coroner Christopher J. Murphy.

Mrs. Hackney lived in Fort Wayne, Ind. She had been visiting her brother for about a month. Besides being under treatment for a nervous ailment she was said to be despondent because of the unemployment of her husband.

The groans of Mrs. Hackney were heard by Mrs. William F. Scheumann, her sister-in-law, after returning from a shopping trip. She telephoned Maj. Scheumann, who came and broke down the door to the cellar whence the sounds emanated and found the woman. She died before medical aid could arrive.

In addition to her husband in Fort Wayne, Mrs. Hackney is survived by three children, all of whom are in the Indiana City. Maj. Scheumann is stationed at Walter Reed Hospital.

Detective Sergt. A. D. Mansfield was assigned to investigate Pessos' report of the disappearance of $273. After questioning Pessos, Detectice Mansfield went to the Clifton street rooming house where Pessos lives.

WOMEN'S DEFENSE GROUP SEEKS NAVY UP TO LONDON PACT

FECHET DECLARES U. S. NEEDS MORE AIRCRAFT

Conference Resolution Asks Building Up of Army and National Guard.

A pilgrimage to Capitol Hill was made yesterday by 800 members of the Women's Patriotic Conference on National Defense to exert influence upon Congress for passage of the Vinson Navy construction bill.

The women, who represent 42 patriotic societies in all of the States, called upon their congressional State delegations, urging support of the bill. They also sought Speaker Garner and several kept a vigil outside his office door.

Their visit came after they had heard Maj. Gen. James E. Fechet, former chief of the Army Air Corps, say that due to pacifists this country has slipped to sixth place in air defense, fifteenth place in ground strength and second place in sea power.

Vinson Greeted by Delegates.

Representative Vinson, author of the Navy construction bill, was greeted by the women, who offered him their support of the measure. "We came to ask you to bring your bill out on the floor of Congress and then see that it is passed," said Mrs. Hobart.

The delegation also had announced that they were seeking Representative Rainey, of Illinois, floor leader, "to show him that we mean business," and they also wanted to talk with Chairman Byrns, of the appropriation committee, to urge him to advocate appropriations providing for adequate national defense.

The visit of the delegation was mentioned on the floor of the House by Representative Dyer (Republican), of Missouri.

The conference adopted resolutions at its meeting in Constitution Memorial Hall calling upon Congress to build up the Navy in ships and personnel to the limits of the London treaty; and opposing further reduction of national defense by curtailing necessary appropriations.

Their resolutions asked the building up of the National Guard and the Regular Army; asked that no cuts be made in appropriations for the R. O. T. C. and the Citizens Military Training Camps; opposed the abolition of Army posts on the Mexican border, and stressed the importance of continuing and maintaining chemical warfare service.

Orient Increases Strength.

Gen. Fechet, referring to the crisis in the Orient, said: "A great increase in military strength has been built up in the Orient, and a new cause for world friction set up in Japan's occupation of Manchuria.

"Japan's lack of desire to stick to the 5-5-3 ratio on the sea is also significant, especially as she is now and will be for some time, over the 5-5-3 ratio in strength, due to the completed vessels in her navy at the disarmament conference."

In order to prevent aggression at home, and to exert a salutary pressure on foreign nations to keep the peace among themselves, he urged that our Navy be built up to treaty limits; that the air defenses be increased by 3,600 planes to the Army, and the Navy to 12 carriers.

Secretary of the Navy Adams said Navy men "don't want war." They seek to make you and your country safe. We hope, as eagerly as you, that the Geneva conference will produce results which will make peace easier and surer, but if the conference should fail—if the hope of peace that way fails, we hope we may have an orderly program of defense."

North Cleveland Park Opposes Mapes Measure

A resolution backing the stand of the Federation of Citizens Associations against the proposed Mapes tax legislation was adopted last night at the meeting of the North Cleveland Park Citizens Association in the Masonic Hall at Wisconsin avenue and Windom place.

John B. Dickman, jr., was elected to fill a vacancy as delegate to the federation, which was occasioned by the resignation of Mrs. M. Z. Baughman. Plans were begun for a bicentennial card party to be given by the group on the first Tuesday of next month.

Association Fights NoncitizenOfficials

A resolution adopted last night by the Columbia Heights Citizens Association at a meeting held in the New Amsterdam Hotel, Fourteenth and Fairmont streets northwest, urged that all District Commissioners and other officials be appointed from the civilian population of Washington, rather than have outsiders and military officers receive salaries paid by District taxpayers.

An act of Congress in 1878 provided for a District Engineer Commissioner, it was pointed out, and since that time the office has been filled by a man in military service. The association urged that future District officials be appointed from the ranks of Washington citizens.

Frank Morrison, secretary of the American Federation of Labor, addressed the meeting.

U. S. Educator to Speak.

Dr. Elise H. Martens, of the United States Office of Education, will talk on "Some Problems in the Education of Exceptional Children," before the Public School Association tonight at 8 o'clock in the Franklin Building.
